Maryland Cattlemen Hold Annual Meeting

BY SHARON B. SCHUSTER
Maryland Correspondent
HAGERSTOWN, MD. —

"The more things change the more they stay the same." That was the underlying theme in Leon Locke's address to members of the Maryland Cattlemen's Association at their annual meeting on Saturday at the Hagerstown Sheraton Inn.

Locke, the chairman elect of the National Livestock and Meat Board told the approximately 200 people in attendance that the Board "is the industry's best kept secret." He likened its development to the miracle of the mustard seed - an entity so large as the mustard tree which sprang from something so small.

Thomas E. Wilson is credited for having "planted the seed" for the idea of the formation of "a proper organization to represent the united industry." In 1919, at a time when just about the only standard for quality of meat was "corn-fed," there was a great demand for beef with grass-fat cattle being shipped to the corn-belt for finishing.

Meat packers enjoyed fat profits during this era when producers had few alternatives for marketing their cattle and retailers had few other suppliers. Wilson urged those involved in the meat industry to "band together for the common good. Somebody has got to

Brilliant colors and fragrant woodland aroma greeted those who visited the Philadelphia Flower Show held this week at the Civic Center, Philadelphia. This spring garden features the beauty of pink tulips, daffodils, grape hyacinths, English daisies, and lilies, accented by pastel pansies. Called "Color Through the Season," it was designed by Waterloo Gardens, Exton.

BY PAT PURCELL

BALTIMORE, MD. — "Going To Market" was the slogan of the 1989 Annual Meeting of the Farm Credit Bank of Baltimore. More than 250 directors representing Farm Credit Associations from West Virginia, Virginia, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware and Puerto Rico attended the meeting held Wednesday at the Hyatt Regency in Baltimore.

"Going To Market" signifies Farm Credit's approach to better customer service through improved efficiency and productivity with a continued emphasis at cutting costs. Farm Credit has gotten some help in the form of the Agricultural Credit Act of 1987.

The Agricultural Credit Act of 1987 which went into effect January 1, 1988, has brought about many changes in the Farm Credit system. It not only affected the way the Farm Credit Bank of Baltimore (FCBB) and the Farm Credit Associations do business with their customers, but it also affected the way they do business with each other.

Some changes have already taken place. Last year the merger of the Federal Land Bank of Baltimore and the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of Baltimore formed the Farm Credit Bank of Baltimore. And the Federal Land Bank Associations and the Production Credit Associations merged on

Farmers Should Regulate Manure Usage Before They're Forced To

BY LISA RISSER

LANCASTER — More and more public attention is focusing on the environment, and here in the Northeast, a major concern is the Chesapeake Bay. As the general populace seeks answers to the sources of its pollution and ways to get it cleaned up, they are looking at farming.

"The public sees that the sewage plants and industry are being regulated, and they are asking 'why isn't farming regulated?'" said Gerald Heistand, administrative assistant for the Lancaster County Conservation District (LCCD). "I feel it's better to regulate ourselves than have public regulations."

Speaking before dairy farmers at the county's Dairy Day this week, Heistand explained the motives behind drafting a manure ordinance guide.

The guide was submitted to Lancaster County townships last fall, and since that time Warwick Township, in northern Lancaster County has used it to draw up their own ordinance, which was passed last December.

The primary motivation behind the guide was to show the public that the farming community is just as concerned about ground water contamination. "I feel it's important to show that we're doing something about the situation," said Heistand. "If we don't (do something), the public probably will force us to."

Proposed legislation in the state legislature also motivated the LCCD to write the guide. House Bill 2616, which called for farmers to adopt a mandatory nutrient-management plan, died last year when the legislature adjourned. (Turn to Page A26)

MT. JOY (Lancaster)—Little two-year-old Nathan Iager captured the hearts and applause of the banquet crowd here Wednesday, when he went up front representing his mom and dad, Kathy and Gene Iager, Maple Lawn Farm, Fulton, Md., to receive their Pennfield dairy award. Nathan was very serious through the whole ordeal and didn't smile at all until the photographer asked about his pets. That brought a twinkle to his eye and a faint smile. Nathan will have his third birthday in about six weeks.

The event was the annual awards banquet. Pictures of other award winners are on pages A30-31.

PFA In Washington To Talk Ag

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Members of the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association (PFA) delivered a message of "No To More Taxes" loud and clear to Pennsylvania's congressional delegation during a visit to Washington, D.C., this week.

About 180 farmers from throughout the state met with legislators during PFA's annual Washington Tour to discuss national issues of concern to Pennsylvania agriculture.

In a breakfast address March 9 to the farmers and their congressmen, PFA president Keith Eckel said, "History has demonstrated that tax increases result in spending increases." PFA is calling for balancing the budget without tax increases, through an across-the-board spending freeze and a reform of federal entitlement programs.

Since 1980 prices have increased some 37%, Eckel said. "In that same period of time, taxes have gone up by 63%, while federal spending has risen by 72%."

"The record speaks for itself. Tax revenues have increased and the deficit has not been eliminated. Because a tax increase is likely to be a vehicle for additional government spending rather than less, as history indicates, it is highly unlikely that any future tax

ACRES CORN UPDATE:
Corn futures prices closed lower today pressured by weaker cash basis levels and spillover from sharply lower soybeans. Further pressure was linked to the prospects of increased barge traffic as major tributaries begin to open after the thaws. Commercials sold heavy today with sales linked to active corn loan redemption pace. For the week ended February 22, 11.4 million bushels was redeemed from the regular loan and 1.8 million was redeemed from the reserve. March ended today's session 2-3/4 cents lower at $2.75-1/2 while the Dec. option traded 3/4 cents lower at $2.71-1/2.

ACRES SOYBEAN

UPDATE: Soybean futures prices plunged today on technical selling coupled with reports of a drop in the Brazilian basis. Weakness on the opening was in response to follow through selling from yesterday's lower closes and weaker European markets. Reports of favorable weather in Brazil's bean belt added to the pressure with some trades thought to be South American hedge related. March closed 8-3/4 cents lower at $7.55-1/2 while the November option lost 5 cents at $7.37-1/2. Losses of 10-1/4 to 10-3/4 cents were recorded on the May through August options.

ACRES WHEAT UPDATE:
Wheat futures settled lower from 1-3/4 to 4 cents on late session selling linked to sharply lower soybean prices. Long liquidation throughout the session was thought to be generated by overbought conditions. Further pressure was attributed to the inability of prices to move toward contract highs, which left the market vulnerable for a setback. Additional selling was linked to the fairly active redemption pace of wheat from the regular loan stocks with over 3-1/2 million bushels redeemed during the week ended February 22nd. March closed 4 cents lower at $4.30 while the July lost 1-3/4 cents at $4.08.

ACRES CATTLE UPDATE:

Eastern PA & New Jersey Poultry

Wednesday, March 8, 1989

Prices were unchanged. The trade sentiment was barely steady. Live supplies were adequate for the fair but cautious buyer demand. Processors operated less than full schedules primarily because of adverse weather conditions. Demand for canner pack product was no better than fair as further processors fill immediate needs only.

New York & Philadelphia Frozen Eggs

Tuesday, March 7, 1989

Prices were unchanged to higher under a firm but somewhat cautious undertone. Raw material costs increased and were a driving force behind the escalating prices. Demand was light to moderate as most buyers attempted to work from existing floor stocks. Supplies of all products diminished and were barely adequate to adequate; few processors were willing to build frozen inventories at current price levels.

Oklahoma City Feeder Cattle Weekly

Wednesday, March 8, 1989

WEEKLY CATTLE SUMMARY: COMPARED WITH LAST WEEK--FEEDER STEERS UNDER 550 LB. AND HEIFERS UNDER 500 LB. STEADY TO 1.00 LOWER; HEAVIER WEIGHT COMPRISED BULK OF SUPPLY AND THESE 1.00-3.00 LOWER. DEMAND FAIR FOR FEEDLOT WEIGHT CATTLE AND HEAVY STOCKERS; DEMAND GOOD FOR CALVES & LIGHT STOCKERS. BUYER ATTENDANCE GOOD, HOWEVER SEVERAL FEEDLOT BUYERS OUT OF THE MARKET OR NOT VERY AGGRESSIVE. FEEDER QUALITY REMAINED ATTRACTIVE THIS WEEK. SOME FACTORS AFFECTING DEMAND ARE: SEVERAL FEEDLOTS HAVE ADEQUATE NUMBERS DUE TO EARLY MOVEMENT OFF WHEAT PASTURES. PREVIOUS CONTRACTS HAVE PRICE PROTECTION THRU RISK MANAGEMENT. CURRENT SALES HAVE INADEQUATE END PRICE PROTECTION AT CURRENT FEEDER CATTLE PRICE LEVELS. WHEAT IS SHORT OR COMPLETELY GRAZED OFF; LESS CATTLE ARE EXPECTED TO GRAZE OUT WHEAT THRU MAY. CURRENT WHEAT PRICE IS CONDUCTING MORE FARMERS TO MAKE A WHEAT CROP THIS YEAR. SLAUGHTER COWS $5.50-$1.50 HIGHER. SLAUGHTER BULLS FIRM TO $1.00 HIGHER. COW AND BULL DEMAND GOOD; NUMBERS CONTINUE TO RUN LIGHT. ANOTHER LARGE RUN WAS EXPECTED THIS WEEK, HOWEVER SUNDAYS MAJOR SNOW STORM LIMITED CATTLE MOVEMENT FROM ALL BUT THE WESTERN TRADE AREA. RECEIPTS THIS WEEK 10,200; LAST WEEK 27,268; LAST YEAR 11,945. SUPPLY CONSISTED OF 90% YEARLINGS; 7% CALVES; 3% COWS & BULLS. BULK PRICE LEVELS FOLLOW:

Alfalfa's Triple Crown.

Emerald. Maxim. Funk's G-2852. These hardy alfalfas from Hoffman will place you in the winner's circle with improved yields, exceptional stand longevity, and broad-based disease protection.

Emerald's the yield leader from start-to-finish. It has consistently bested Hoffman trials, while producing 5½ percent better than average yields in New York and Pennsylvania state trials.

Maxim's a sure bet for exceptional stand longevity. And its two-year production average of 9.6 tons/acre will give you front-running yields.

Funk's G-2852 tops the field with some of the best disease resistance available. Backed by years of research, this new-comer has shown annual yield advantages of ½ ton/acre.

When you're looking for a winning alfalfa yield, call your local Hoffman seed representative. Or call Hoffman Seeds direct for more information about Alfalfa's Triple Crown.

THE OLD FARMER'S ALMANAC

MAR. 6-12, 1989
Winter redux, then it's deluxe.

Birthday of Michelangelo di Lodovico Buonarroti-Simoni, born Mar 6, 1475 at Caprese, Tuscany International (Working) Women's Day, celebrated Mar 8 and first proclaimed in 1910, is a national holiday in both USSR and China Italian navigator, Amerigo Vespucci, for whom the Americas were named, born Mar 9, 1451 Average length of days for the week 11 hours 36 minutes Mar 12, 1933, FDR's first fireside chat When a woman is speaking to you, listen to what she says with her eyes — Victor Hugo.

Ask the Old Farmer: My grandfather used "grindy" to describe clothing. What does it mean? PC, Texas
It means, as you might suspect, to show signs of wear and tear, just as it sounds

OLD FARMER'S WEATHER FORECAST

New England: Sleet and snow, wouldn't you know? Then clear and warm will do no harm Finally, it's rain — but don't worry, it will change Greater New York-New Jersey: Cloudy and sprinkles, clear and warm; then rain before it turns mild It's a wet beginning to March this year
Middle Atlantic Coastal: Cold and sprinkles, then clear and very warm The week ends with more rain, heavy in the west, and cooler temperatures
Piedmont & Southeast Coastal: Clear and quite warm, then rain and colder temperatures follow. The average temperature this week is 56° F

OPINION

Not Enough To Talk To Ourselves Anymore

In recent years, farmers have become more critical of their farm organizations. It's not enough to sponsor a tour to a neighboring county or publish a newsletter. Farmers now ask, and rightfully so, what does this organization do for me politically and economically? How am I helped in the marketplace? How am I helped in the state or national legislatures?

In the case of milk marketing, membership is mandatory. The law mandates that 15 cents from every hundredweight of milk the dairyman produces be given to farm marketing organizations to manage. Even these organizations, as we reported recently, have now begun efforts to work together. That's good news. We have advocated this merger of efforts for quite some time. A lot of duplicate creative work by advertising and public relations agencies can be saved.

In organizations where there is no law if you join or not, the justification for existence takes on a more immediate reality. If the cost of membership becomes higher than what the farmer perceives is his return of investment, the membership is dropped. That's the way it should be. And our only caution would be to make sure that dropping the membership is not just a short term view.

We can't help but think that to maintain a registered herd of dairy cows regardless of which breed you favor will have long-term economic value. And since the average cost of membership in your breed organization can be offset by the difference in member/non-member registration fees of about three calves, we believe you would want to take the long-view look before dropping membership in your dairy breed organization.

The dairy and livestock breed organizations are to be commended for the development of an export market that can be reached by very ordinary farmers. But in other areas improvement in real benefits to members could be undertaken.

Many activities take place where a lot of effort is spent for farmers to talk to themselves. For example, the dairy and livestock shows. Of course, since we cover about 200 shows each year, we obviously support the system. But if all the shows in the state were outlawed this year, we would still have a strong and healthy dairy and livestock industry.

However, if we don't start to sit down with some of the animal rights organizations and talk to them, we could be out of business overnight. Farmers need to tell these urban people that everything they do from morning until night is aimed at the welfare of their animals.

And if we don't start to talk to legislators and environmental organizations about the need for fertilizers and chemicals in food production, new laws may force us to go back to methods used fifty years ago. And we may face sixty bushels of corn per acre rather than the 200 bushels that can be produced with proper use of commercial products, balanced with on farm nutrients.

Even our fine good-will ambassadors, our dairy, livestock and commodity princes, princesses and queens, are required to spend more time talking to farm groups than to urban or city organizations. It makes us feel good to have these young men and women come and talk to our farm meeting. Besides, it's farmer's money that supports the program, so they have an obligation to come to the farm meeting, right?

We guess that's right. But when the prince, princess or queen talks to farmers it's just another case of talking to ourselves. We're waiting to report on page one about the first farm organization that instead of asking their good will ambassador to speak at their farm meeting, will arrange for them to speak at a town civic meeting instead.

So, when you are deciding which farm organizations to join or drop, take a long term view. And if you decide to join or renew your membership, do your part to help these organizations to get involved in activities that will have significant impact on the future welfare and profitability of agriculture. What many farm organizations are doing should continue to be done. But these other important things should not be left undone. It's just not enough to talk to ourselves anymore.

NOW IS THE TIME

To Prevent Water Pollution

The quality of our water supplies is very important; in most cases it should receive more attention. Many people have wells with high bacteria count and/or with high nitrates. Both of these are undesirable for both domestic and livestock consumption. When feedlots and barns are cleaned out this spring, every effort should be made to incorporate this manure into the topsoil just as quickly as possible. With liquid manure, the soil injection type of applicator does an excellent job. With other types of surface spreaders, the manure should be disced or plowed into the topsoil soon after application; this is especially true on slopes above water supplies. The application of fertilizer warrants the same attention; mix it with the top soil very soon after application. Also surface water should be directed away from wells or any other water supply.

To Be Aware That Calcium Reduces Blood Pressure

According to studies made by the Oregon Health Services University in Portland, there is a link between hypertension/high blood pressure and calcium metabolic disorders. A random sampling of about 1,500 people revealed that those with high blood pressure also showed a 22% reduction in dietary calcium. Researchers at the Center stated that if everyone in the U.S. consumed enough dairy products to meet the daily allowance of calcium recommended by the National Academy of Science, hypertension in this country would be reduced by 50%. The potential health benefits of dairy products is being recognized by many researchers; they are exploring the effect of dietary calcium in body fats, cancer, heart diseases and cataract formation. We look to continued research in these areas.

To Practice Safety

Around Liquid Manure Pits
Many manure pits will be cleaned out at this time of year for field application. This by-product of the livestock and dairy business is very useful as fertilizer. However, the pit can be a safety hazard because of poisonous and explosive gases. When the mixture is agitated in order to be removed, these gases are more plentiful and much more dangerous. Good ventilation above the pit is very important. Also, anyone who goes down in the empty pit should be wearing a gas mask. These gases are dangerous and can be fatal to both humans and animals. We urge all farmers to caution their employees of this potential danger.

To Check Ventilation Systems

We are into the season of the year that ventilation is very important. The fans in our poultry houses and dairy barns have been working hard through the winter months. They have accumulated dust on the louvers and screens and developed loose belts, so they are less efficient — in other words they are not moving as much air as they are rated.

This is a good time to go through your buildings and clean the fan blades, the louvers and screens. Tighten the fan belts, and be sure to check the inlet screens. Many times, in our poultry houses in particular, we're not getting air circulation because the air cannot get into the building. Clean these inlet screens so they are not restricting air.

Also, check the thermostats to make certain they are working properly.

Poor ventilation can cause health problems in poultry houses and "off" flavored milk in dairy barns. This is a good time to take care of some of these inside jobs.

INTERCESSIONS
March 12, 1989

Background Scripture: Colossians 1:1-14.

Devotional Reading: 1 Peter 2:1-10.

I don't know of a better expression of the meaning of Christ's saving love than Paul's statement to the church at Colossae: "He has delivered us from the dominion of darkness and transferred us to the kingdom of his beloved Son, in whom we have the redemption, the forgiveness of sins" (Colossians 1: 13,14). Without the love of God in Christ, life for me would be a "dominion of darkness." With Christ's redemption it is to me like coming out of a dark tunnel and emerging into the brilliant light of day.

Yet, wonderful as Paul's allusion is we find there is more to living as a follower of Christ than being "transferred" from "the dominion of darkness" to Christ's kingdom. Much as most of us would like to stop with what Christ has done for us — the long-run view, there is also the concern of daily living — the short-run view. It does not matter what Christ has done to bring us into his kingdom, if, in our daily lives, we still struggle in the dominion of darkness.

TIMELY INTERCESSIONS

Paul knew that and his comprehension is reflected in the prayers he prayed for the Colossian Christians: "...we have not ceased to pray for you" (1:9). What were these intercessions on their behalf? For one thing, "that you may be filled with the knowledge of his will in all spiritual wisdom and understanding." That's one of those short-run daily needs that helps to shape the long-run picture: to know God's will in our daily life. All of us need that, don't we?

Paul's next intercession is no less practical and timely: that you "may lead a life worthy of the Lord, fully pleasing to him, bearing fruit in every good work..." (1:10). We may not know specifically what we need on any particular day, but the prayer to lead our lives "worthy of the Lord" is always a practical necessity. I'm not trying to win a Pulitzer Prize with this column, but I do pray that it may be "pleasing to him" and bear fruit with you, the reader.

WITH POWER
Paul's third petition is also one we need on a daily basis: that you may "be strengthened with all power, according to his glorious might, for all endurance and patience with joy..." (1:11). Disappointment, failure, rejection, sin — all of these are challenges to our patience and endurance. Even though Christ has transferred us from darkness to light, we still have to find the power to meet the trials and challenges of daily living — a power that must come from beyond ourselves when our own resources have failed.

To discover God's will, to live fruitful lives, and find the power to endure — these are timely intercessions that never become obsolete.

Rosenthal Lehigh Valley presents
AN AGRICULTURAL SEMINAR
 What's ahead for grain and meat prices in 1989?
 Will we see $12.00 Soybeans, $4.00 Corn and 80¢ Cattle?

At our Free seminar, we will fully discuss the current conditions and future prospects for grains and livestock. What effect will last year's drought and huge foreign grain purchases have on our current low grain stocks?

Commodities to be Discussed:	Topics to be Covered:
• Soybeans	• Hedging and forward pricing
• Soybean Meal	• Strategies and trading objectives
• Soybean Oil	• Money Management of a futures and options account.
• Corn	• Using options with offer UNLIMITED profit potential with LIMITED risk.
• Wheat
• Oats
• Cattle and Feeders
• Hogs and Bellies

An excellent opportunity for farmers, dealers and investors to learn about grain and livestock futures and options.

- Our only business is commodity futures and options on futures.
- Same location and principals for over twenty years.

DATE: Wed., March 29

TIME: 7:30 P.M.

PLACE: Sheraton Inn, Dannville, PA Exit 33, Rt. 80

☐ I plan to attend
☐ I do not plan to attend - please send me grain and livestock information and your Market Letter.

Early-weaned pigs normally lose weight during the first week on dry feed. Keep your pigs growing and gaining up to a pound a week with Agway PRO:LEAN EARLY WEAN SUPREME™.

AN EXCELLENT FEED MADE BETTER

Cooperative research farm trials with nearly 1,000 three-week-old weaned pigs showed an increased average daily weight gain of 28.3% over the best, previously developed, Cooperative Research Farm starter ration for early weaned pigs. Average daily feed consumption was up 9.3%, and feed efficiency improved by 14.9% in the first 14 days in the nursery.

EARLY WEAN SUPREME is a highly palatable feed made with high levels of milk nutrients. It is also medicated to control scours. It assures an improved rate of weight gain and feed efficiency in early-weaned pigs.

Ask your Agway Salesperson or your local Agway store for PRO:LEAN EARLY WEAN SUPREME and give your early-weaned pigs a fast start on dry feed.

Working for people who work the land.

FARM MANAGEMENT

Drafting A Partnership Agreement

By Alan Strock
Farm Management Agent for Chester and Lancaster Counties

This time of year many farmers are thinking about and planning for future changes in the business structure of their farm to reap all possible tax benefits. We do this with the use of rental, lease, joint venture, family security, and buy-sell agreements. We also use benefits from installment sales, gifting programs, partnerships and corporations. Some of the options available are:

- a.) transfer of farm assets
- b.) change earned income to unearned income
- c.) simplify the operation
- d.) pool available resources
- e.) start building equity for the next generation
- f.) provide more flexibility in personal scheduling
- g.) limit the liability of certain individuals
- h.) redefine management responsibilities
- i.) provide a continuous supply of labor and/or management
- j.) include non-farming individuals in the profits and ownership of the operation.

Let's look at the partnership agreement. It is important to put the agreement in writing because there are many situations which may arise. Putting the agreement in writing can eliminate future disagreements and arguments that may destroy the partnership as well as the personal relationship.

The partnership agreement may be divided into the following eight sections:

- 1.) Introduction
- 2.) Contributions
- 3.) Labor, management and vacations
- 4.) Distribution of profits
- 5.) Financial records
- 6.) Partners Limits
- 7.) Dissolution or termination
- 8.) Miscellaneous.

Certain topics should be addressed in each section.

Introduction

This section should include the partnership name and address, name and address of the individuals involved, type of business, term of the partnership, and location of the partnership. Usually this is short and states the basics of the agreement.

Contributions

This section should detail the specific land, buildings, trees, machinery, livestock, supplies, feedstuffs, and/or cash contributions of each partner initially to the partnership. It should also discuss the recording procedures for tax and fair market capital accounts for each partner and how they relate to ownership of the partnership. It may also refer you to other rental or lease agreements.

This section should also state that all assets purchased or grown by the partnership after the partnership's formation will be considered partnership assets.

Labor, management and vacations

This section is critically important. Labor and management contributions and responsibilities should be spelled out explicitly unless they will be equal in all ways.

Almost always the business will operate more smoothly if one partner is acknowledged as the primary decision maker in a specified area. It should state which management decisions will be made strictly by joint agreement. This section should also state whether each partner will devote their undivided time and attention to the business and if side line businesses of any type will be allowed.

The time off and vacation limits should be stated in this section. Be sure to allow for vacations as this can be a major reason to form a partnership.

Distribution of profits

This section should be very detailed. The term "net profit" should be defined. Detail how the profits will be distributed which include the exact amounts of monthly draws for each partner.

You may consider the use of a guaranteed draw for a younger partner who will be putting more time and energy into the business than the senior partner. Using the guaranteed draw will give the junior partner more money to survive on, but yet not decrease his ownership of the business. This guaranteed draw will be a tax deduction, just like any wage for the operating partnership.

The effect of a substantial increase or decrease in farm profits on partners' draws should be discussed as well as the effect of a prolonged vacation, pursuit of other interests, illness or disability.

It is critically important that you spell out the payment for services of the spouses and children here, especially if the contributions are not nearly equal. The relationship of spouses to each other can often make or break the partnership.

Financial records

The financial records are the lifeblood of the partnership and need serious attention. The following are important points to address:

•Who will post the records, file the invoices, and see that the taxes are filled?

•What bank will the partnership use?

•Who can sign partnership checks?

•What is the maximum any one partner can spend without the other partners consent?

•What, if any, personal expenses (taxes, fuel, vehicle repairs, utilities, etc.) will the partnership pay.

•Will the partnership operate on a fiscal or calendar year tax basis?

•How often will the partners meet to review the financial records of the partnership?

•How soon after the end of the business year must the books be finalized and reviewed by all parties?

Partners' Limits

Limits should be set on the amount that an individual partner

RIDOMIL USES THE SAME BASIC PRINCIPLE

The best defense against tobacco disease is Ridomil®. Just one application (at labeled rates) in the field before transplanting controls blue mold, black shank and Pythium all season long.

How? First, Ridomil stops disease on contact in the soil. Then its systemic action allows it to be absorbed into the plant through the roots.

Once in the plant, it keeps the can borrow, buy, or sell in the partnership name. Other limitations may include: No partner, without the consent of the other partner(s), may obligate the partnership to enter into capital transactions, borrow, or lend money, admit new partners, hire new laborer(s), provide labor or management for other purposes, and the like.

Dissolution or Termination

The subject of life insurance should be addressed in this section as it relates to providing capital to purchase a deceased partner's share of the partnership. Options for termination due to choice, death, or disability should be covered here.

This section can either refer to a separate buy-sell agreement to detail the agreement in this section. This section would give each partner the option to buy out the other partner's share of partnership property for any reason. The method of pricing all assets (usually market value) should be stated.

The option of an installment sale with a stated interest rate and a certain repayment period may be offered to all parties. This section should spell out the options of the departing partner, heirs, or assign as to what will happen if the remaining partner does not want to buy. One or two methods of arbitration should be spelled out to resolve major disagreements.

Miscellaneous

Some of the items covered in this section may include provisions for admitting a new partner, continuation of an incapacitated partner as a partner, how to add to or amend the partnership agreement, or various options to purchase or lease real estate that is used but not owned by the partnership.

A regularly held meeting of all partners in a neutral spot such as a diner should be spelled out in this section. This meeting, to be held as often as necessary but at least three times a year, would be used to iron out disagreements and make plans for future capital investments, cropping and livestock decisions.

These are some of the subjects that should be discussed before a formal agreement is drafted. The Penn State Cooperative Extension has an excellent publication to help you in forming your partnership. To request your circular just call your local extension office and request Special Circular 265,

Farmers May Be Eligible For Conservation Awards

WASHINGTON, DC — Know any farmers and ranchers who conserve their soil and water in innovative, cost-effective ways?

The National Soil and Water Conservation Awards Program would like to know about them.

Sponsored by the National Endowment for Soil and Water Conservation and funded by the Du Pont Company, the program is in its seventh year.

One outstanding conservation farmer or rancher in each state will be selected by June 1989, and that family will be honored in a variety of statewide events. The state winners also are eligible for national honors.

"Recognizing the true leaders who achieve resource management and pollution abatement can encourage many others in agriculture to conserve their natural resources," said Emmett Barker, chairman of the Endowment and president of the Farm and Industrial Equipment Institute. "These remarkable families and thousands like them show that soil and water conservation can be accomplished voluntarily. They demonstrate that conservation is an essential and cost-effective investment in a healthy, sustainable agriculture."

John A. Krol, group vice president for Du Pont agricultural products, said: "Du Pont's first objective is safety — and that includes safety in the environment. Thus, we want to help many more farmers and ranchers understand that they can protect their resources and water quality as they produce food and fiber. The Du Pont Company is proud to support this important conservation awards program."

The top conservation farmer or rancher in each state is selected by committees of farm, conservation, and government leaders. From these state winners, 10 national finalists are selected. They and their spouses receive an expense-paid trip to attend a national awards ceremony in the fall.

Three national winners — chosen from among the 10 finalists — receive a $1,000 cash award and a certificate at White House ceremonies in Washington.

National winners in the 1988 program were from California, Kansas and Virginia. The other finalists were from Florida, Kentucky, Maine, Pennsylvania, Texas, Wisconsin, and Wyoming.

The National Endowment for Soil and Water Conservation, established in June 1982, is a non-profit, privately funded, non-political organization dedicated to conserving the nation's agricultural resources and promoting a sense of stewardship for the land by all Americans.

Dairymen Head For The Hill

BY JOYCE BUYP

York Co. Correspondent
WASHINGTON, D.C. —

Dairy farmers headed for the Hill last week, as Pennmarva Dairymen's Federation hosted a Congressional reception in the Longworth Building.

Some fifty dairy producers representing Pennmarva visited with Congressional representatives and staffers on March 1, discussing key legislative issues related to the dairy industry.

Pennmarva Dairymen's Federation represents more than 6,000 dairy producers in the three milk marketing cooperatives of Federal Order #4. Member cooperatives are Atlantic Dairy Cooperative, Southampton, Pennsylvania, Middle Atlantic Division of Dairymen, Inc., Sykesville, Maryland, and Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers, Arlington, Virginia.

The reception on the Hill followed the annual reorganization of Pennmarva and an issues update by a National Milk Producers Federation representative.

"No more cuts - dairy farmers have done their share," is the position taken by NMPF on budget proposals to further reduce federal dairy programs.

NMPF cites some $2.2 billion paid to the federal treasury by the nation's dairy farmers, through production assessment programs.

In the last five years, dairymen's efforts have helped slice federal dairy program costs from $2.6 billion to $700 million.

The Federation also opposes an extension of the 1985 Farm Bill, rather supporting on schedule, by 1990, revised legislation to direct the nation's agriculture policies.

Proponents of an extension of the 1985 Farm Bill suggest drawing the current round of GATT talks to a conclusion before setting long-term policy for the U.S. NMPF asserts that domestic policy should be in place to effect the U.S. stance on the GATT negotiations, rather than letting trade agreements set policy for American dairy producers.

Pennmarva Federation recognizes the need to restore a balance between milk supply and commercial demand. Working with NMPF, Pennmarva and other member organizations are seeking methods to develop program revisions to accomplish a supply-demand balance, and reduce government costs.

The Federal Milk Marketing Order Program, under criticism from some government factions, gets continuing Pennmarva support as a tool to maintain stable market conditions. Members take the position that reviews of the Federal Order program should be designed toward its improvement, not discrediting it or causing reduced efficiency.

Positions taken by Pennmarva also include: supporting reinstatement of income averaging and capital gains treatment for assets in the federal tax program; continued support for federally funded and directed nutrition programs at not less than present funding levels; and opposition to trade agreements which allow greater access to U.S. milk and dairy product markets by other nations.

Fruit Growers Seminar Set

GREENSBURG (Westmoreland) — Penn State Extension is sponsoring a day long educational seminar for western Pennsylvania commercial fruit growers on Wednesday, March 15, at Mountain View Inn, Rt. 30, east of Greensburg. The latest production techniques for both tree fruit and berry production will be addressed by specialists from Penn State's College of Agriculture.

In addition to the educational sessions there will be a trade show featuring agricultural suppliers who serve fruit growers in this part of Pennsylvania.

So if you are involved in commercial fruit growing or seriously considering it, plan to attend the Western Pennsylvania Commercial Fruit Growers Seminar at Mountain View Inn, Greensburg, on Wednesday, March 15, starting at 8:30 a.m. Registration fee is $12 per person. For more information contact your local Penn State Extension Office.

start it and it has to come from the producer," he suggested.

A short time after Wilson spoke, Kansans, along with the American National Cattlemen's Association, Texas and Southwest Cattle Raisers Association, National Wool Growers Association, Corn-Belt Meat Producers Association, and Illinois Agricultural Association, met with meat packers, and a steering committee was appointed for the formation of an organization. In 1920, Swine producers joined in the cause and the National Livestock and Meat Board was officially launched on March 10, 1922. Locke reported that there were twelve supporting organizations in the original coalition, and "eleven of the seventeen directors were producers. This emphasis on production remains the philosophy of the meat board today," added Locke.

Now thirty organizations form the coalition with 130 directors representing various segments of the industry, including producers, packers, stockyards, breed associations, cattlemen, and the restaurant and food services.

Locke said that check-off dollars collected today are used for "protecting and improving consumer demand for beef, pork and veal, and for promotion and research projects. With the 1985 Farm Act came a mandate for "beef promotion and research - it gave us a chance to show what could be done," explained Locke. The dollar per head check-off referendum was passed after previous unsuccessful attempts.

The first check-off program in this country was on a voluntary basis, Locke recalled. "Producers were asked for five cents per carload of livestock." A carload was equivalent to 25 head of cattle, or 75 hogs or 75 sheep and lambs. In 1931 it was increased to 25 cents per carload with an alternate provision offered at 1 cent per head.

"In the early days," said Locke, "the directors found more problems than solutions." Faced with such adversaries as vegetarians who circulated rumors claiming meat caused rheumatism and gout, and the post-war European market blaming American meat for an epidemic of influenza that killed ten million people world-wide, and Californians who believed they would contract hoof and mouth disease, the National Livestock and Meat Board "raised enough money to be a force in promoting American meat."

Locke observed that "a shortcoming of modern agriculture is that we pay little attention to history. Here we are today with problems not a lot unlike what they had when they began. They talked about rheumatism and gout. We talk about calories and cholesterol." Locke said "the adversaries are primarily the same." Over the years "there have been many, many, many changes, particularly in communications and technology," noted Locke. "We're still down there in the trenches fighting for our share of the market."

On a closing note, the Chairman of the National Livestock and Meat Board encouraged the members of the Maryland Cattlemen's Association to "get enthusiastically involved and be positive. There are great changes taking place all about us. If you're not willing to change, you'd better give up the ship."

In a report by the National Cattlemen magazine, total membership in the Maryland Cattlemen's Association as of March 31, 1988 was 63; Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association, 123. The Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Conference is scheduled for March 17 and 18 at the Altoona Sheraton, Route 220 South, Altoona, Pa.

Nelson has distributed 200 posters with the theme- Maryland with Pride, National Agriculture Day, Honoring America's Producers.

The poster has a color illustration entitled Harvest, by Bart Forbes.

"This is a joint project involving the Extension Service, the Maryland Department of Agriculture, and a group called Maryland Ag Week, Inc.," explained Nelson.

Farm Credit

January 1, 1989 to form Agricultural Credit Associations. These ASAs operate as locally managed Farm Credit Associations. This move was an immediate time and money saver to the system because it cut the need for duplicate financial records for the FLBAs and the PCAs.

The mergers also gave greater independence to the local Farm Credit Associations, according to Senior Vice-President Ben Amoss.

A good example of this is the lending rate. Prior to January 1, 1989, the FCBB set the interest lending rate for all their associations in the five states and Puerto Rico. The Farm Credit Act of 1987 gave the Farm Credit stockholders the opportunity to vote and change that. As of January 1, interest rates can be set at the local level and based on the determining factors in that area alone. This allows the associations to be more directly responsive to the specific needs of their customers. And allows the individual associations to be more competitive with commercial banks.

"Going To Market" signals

Farm Credit's renewed commitment to find better ways to serve the agricultural borrower. And Farm Credit directors and officers are doing more than paying lip service to this theme for 1989. They are taking action.

That action has taken the form of a task force assigned to assess the efficiency of the Farm Credit Associations (FCA) and the Farm Credit Bank of Baltimore (FCBB). The group will determine what functions are most important and how these functions can be done most efficiently. Perhaps most importantly, the task force will determine by whom the work should be done. Their findings will most likely result in a staff reduction.

"At the end of 1988 there were 183 people on the staff. By the end of 1989 that will have reduced by 12 percent," said FCBB Executive Vice-President and Chief of Operations Glenn Stevens.

The task force will submit their findings and recommendations to the directors for comment and review. "When these recommendations come to you give them your full attention," said T. Edward Lippy, district board member. "If our bank is to be the premier lender of agricultural credit in the Baltimore district we need to be a well-planned partnership."

Farmer Mac is not a new farmer down the road. What it is is a new opportunity for Farm Credit to take advantage of a growing secondary mortgage market. District board member R. H. Strickler began his address by putting a firecracker under a can.

hikes will decrease government spending or deflate the mushrooming deficit," Eckel said. He added, "We farmers in Pennsylvania and across this great nation say emphatically that we want the federal government to operate with a balanced budget by cutting government spending and absolutely... no new taxes!"

A new farm bill will be written next year and PFA also offered its views on what provisions the 1990 Farm Bill should contain. "This legislation must be flexible to adapt to changing economic conditions, production practices and the trade environment," Eckel said. The next farm bill should "Farmer Mac has the potential of being dynamite to the Farm Credit system. It is tool and if we use it wisely, we can make it work for us. If we ignore it, we may be making a very serious mistake," said Strickler.

The secondary mortgage market is the market to which lending institutions sell their loans. For example, the association would make the loan to the individual borrowers. Then repackage those loans to create a diversified package tailored to meet the needs of the investor who purchases those loans. The association would be the middle man to make the loans, service the loan, collect receipts and collect the fees for packaging the loan.

PFA In Washington

continue to focus on expansion of trade, continuance of agricultural research, development of new products and uses for farm commodities, and the search for economically feasible production alternatives to meet environmental concerns, Eckel told the lawmakers. He added that PFA believes the 1990 Farm Bill, "...must permit agriculture to continue its economic progress made in recent years."

Eckel also addressed farmers' concerns about restrictions on the state's 498,000 acres of wetlands. He told the gathering that, because of government wetland regulations, approval from seven different agencies is required if a landowner wants to dredge, fill, build on, or do anything to a stream of water, a pond or any standing water on his farm. PFA believes the regulatory definition of wetlands should be expended to allow normal farming practices or else a landowner should be compensated for losing use of his wetland acreage.

PFA is a voluntary farm organization representing over 23,600 families in 54 county associations. It is part of the world's largest farm group, the 3.7 million member American Farm Bureau Federation.

Finger Pointing At U.S. Dairy Forum

BY JOYCE BUPP

York Co. Correspondent

PHOENIX, AZ — Key leaders in the nation's dairy industry gathered in Phoenix in early February, for updates on industry issues and sharing policy ideas.

Hosted at the Pointe at Squaw Peak, the U.S. Dairy Forum focused on ideas ranging from milk marketing orders, drought and production costs to restructuring of the foods industry, nutrition and advertising.

Especially timely, in light of dissension among participating nations in the current round of GATT trade talks, was a panel of international representatives addressing the world dairy situation. Participants represented Canada, New Zealand, France and the United States.

Richard Tudor Price, Agriculture Canada, sees a new mood in world trade against production subsidies and excess product "dumping" on the world markets. Current world market prices, especially for skim milk powder, are high, reflecting several factors which affected production and supply.

The European Economic Community imposed quotas in 1984, and further reduced them two years later, while selling at a loss huge volumes of butter and skim milk powder which had accumulated with high subsidy prices. Meanwhile, New Zealand has experienced two severe drought seasons back-to-back, further cutting world powder supplies.

The Canadian warned that current high powder prices are temporary; the EEC is raising quota by one million tons and New Zealand will eventually have favorable weather. Cost of producing milk in New Zealand is about one-fourth the cost in the U.S.

"Treat your current exports as a windfall," advised Price, "and not a basis for long-term investment."

Canada's dairy industry is similar to the U.S. in several respects, according to panelist Price. Like the U.S., Canada has limited dairy imports, about three percent of production.

Processors have a guaranteed market for butter and skim milk powder to the Canadian Dairy Commission. However, if the Canadian government resells those products at a loss, the difference is charged back to Canadian dairy producers, not the treasury. Support prices to producers and make allowances to processors are based on costs.

Greatest difference is in the Canadian quota system, with quota amounts bought and sold like other farm capital assets. Producers do receive a direct federal payment on industrial (manufacturing) milk, based on butterfat, currently about $2.20/cwt. on 3.5 test milk. Fluid milk is controlled by the provinces, each using quota and pricing systems.

Upshot of the programs is a fairly stable production, and Canada remains a relatively small "player" in the world's dairy trade. With less subsidization in competing countries, Canada could someday become more world market oriented. Tradeoff would be that domestic markets would be more accessible to foreign competition.

Robert De Wilde, France, outlined various programs of the European Economic Community in the past two decades aimed at controlling dairy production. Included have been cow slaughter subsidies, diversion programs, and the 1984 quota introduction.

De Wilde also cited EEC quotas, the New Zealand drought and U.S. diversion and buyout programs as contributing to reduced world market stocks and higher international prices.

"The EEC has played more than its part in balancing the world dairy markets," he observed. World market volume is 25 million tons milk equivalent, and the EEC has taken 15 million tons out of production.

"It is hard," De Wilde added, "to explain to our farmers why other countries can increase production, while they must reduce theirs."

Nigel Mitchell, New Zealand Dairy Board, told Forum participants that the U.S. dairy industry has been insulated from international market developments.

"It is to me ironic that the dairy industry in the United States has such relatively little knowledge of global dairy developments and issues," said Mitchell. He predicted that forces such as increasing integration of the world's major economies and new technology, will change that.

"It will not be so easy, I would say impossible, for the U.S. dairy industry to be insulated easily from the effects of these changes in the way it has in the past," Mitchell added. He cited the petroleum industry as an example of free world market trading, with Middle East production changes impacting immediately on American consumers and oilmen.

According to the New Zealander, world dairy trade is tightly regulated among participating nations with quotas, tariffs, and regulatory measures. Only two to three percent of total world milk production, 30 billion pounds, is open to true competitive pricing.

New Zealand, he adds, is unique in that it exports 85 percent of its dairy production, and therefore highly susceptible to price swings from excess product "dumping." With surpluses reduced, and the USSR emerging as a stable customer of dairy products, Mitchell anticipates a true world market picture emerging, driven by supply and demand.

World market butter prices continue to be below domestic support prices in the U.S., and Mitchell suggests an adjustment in the competitive value of butterfat to non-fat powder under the support program. That, he says, would bring the U.S. dairy industry into closer harmony with the international economy.

William Paddock, Foreign Agricultural Service of USDA, reviewed U.S. dairy exports of the past two decades. Total value climbed in that time, but took a surge in 1988 as skim powder prices strengthened. For the first eleven months of 1988, dairy product exports were valued at $525 million, up 14 percent over 1987.

Eleven countries purchased a total 88,785 million tons of dairy products from the CCC in fiscal 1988, about two-thirds of that milk powder. Major buyers included Algeria, Jamaica, India, Iraq and Mexico.

Paddock noted that in mid-1987, powder has selling in northern European ports between $800 and $900 a ton, about half the current price. Casein prices jumped from $1 to as high as $2.55/pound. Since the EEC has traditionally accounted for 40 to

Americans To Celebrate Agriculture On March 20

EPHRATA (Lancaster) — In just nine more days, on March 20, spring will be here. As everyone celebrates the advent of another growing season, President George Bush, Congress, and Pennsylvania Governor Robert Casey are encouraging Americans to salute agriculture.

March 20, National Agriculture Day, is the kick-off to a week-long national celebration of the farming industry and related agribusinesses.

In his proclamation Casey writes, "Agriculture remains the Commonwealth's number-one industry. Across Pennsylvania, the family farm continues to be at the core of our economic and social heritage...Our farmers continue to make Pennsylvania a Commonwealth that works."

Pennsylvanians can take pride in the efforts of farmers within their state. Pennsylvania is among the top five states in production of many agricultural products. Listed below are some of Pennsylvania's agricultural accomplishments.

•Lancaster County is the number one agricultural county east of the Mississippi, ranking 11th nationally. Chester County ranks 46th nationally in farm production.

•Pennsylvania ranks number one in production of mushrooms, potato chips, pretzels, and milk chocolate; second in production of ice cream and total frozen dairy products; third in production of milk sherbet, veal, eggs, and corn for silage; fourth in production of laying chickens, peaches, wholesale floriculture crops, Italian cheese, grapes, and ice milk; and fifth in cut flowers, apples, butter, milk cow, milk production, export of dairy products, creamed cottage cheese, and fresh tomatoes.

•The average value per acre of Pennsylvania farmland, with buildings included, was $1,819 as of February 1, 1988, eighth highest in the country.

•Farms create employment for nearly 20 percent of Pennsylvania's 5.4 million workforce. The percentage includes producers, growers and processors, as well as those providing the machinery, supplies, and services essential to farm production.

•Pennsylvania's 56,500 farm families annually produce $3.2 billion in crops and livestock, thereby stimulating $35 billion in related economic activity (based on 1987 data).

•Poultry farmers produced 4.85 billion eggs valued at $173.9 million; and commercial turkey growers raised 8 million birds in 1987.

A national fact: The national civilian per capita consumption of major food commodities in 1986 was 140.3 pounds of meat; 14.7 pounds of fish; 103.8 pounds of poultry and eggs; 272.3 pounds of dairy products; 156 pounds of fresh and processed fruits; 157.9 pounds of vegetables; 155.5 pounds of grains; and 127.9 pounds of fats and oils.

Atlantic District 26 Locals To Meet

SOUTHAMPTON (Bucks) — The Chambersburg and Mercersburg Locals of Atlantic Dairy Cooperative District 26 will hold their annual dinner meeting March 10 at 7 p.m. at the Kauffman's Ruritan Building.

Robert B. McSparran, a Peach Bottom dairy farmer and president of Atlantic, will be the guest speaker. McSparran will report on cooperative business and dairy issues.

During the meeting, Quality Milk Awards will be presented to Raymond E. and Leah F. Rodes, Waynesboro, and Richard E. and Helen Hoffeditz, Mercersburg. Both members qualified for Atlantic's quality premium for all 12 months during the 1987-1988 fiscal year.

Membership awards will also be presented to the following: 25 years -- Antrim Spring Farms, Harold, Rodney and Roger Crider, Chambersburg; Mabel and Raymond Bricker, Chambersburg; Martin, Elva and Myron Burkholder, Pleasant Hall; Wayne and Carolyn Martin, Shippensburg; Michael I. and V. Dairy Heifer Reproductive Management Seminar

The most profitable age for first calving is between twenty-four and twenty-six months. Heifers that calve later produce slightly more milk during their first lactation. However, increased costs of raising late-calving heifers, the delay in recovering investment costs, and reduced production per day of herd life outweigh the slight increase in milk yield. If heifers are managed well, they are large enough to breed at fifteen months and calve at twenty-four months of age.

A heifer reaches puberty when normal sexual behavior is exhibited and ovulation occurs. Onset of puberty is more closely related to body weight than to age. Heifers reach puberty when body weight is 30% to 40% that of average adult weight. Occasionally, the first few estrous cycles occur without behavior signs of heat. These are called silent heats. On the other hand, some of the first standing heats are followed by anovulation (no ovulation).

Frequency of silent heat and anovulation decreases as heifers experience more cycles. For these reasons and because they are not yet large enough, heifers should not be bred when they first reach puberty. If growth is slowed down by underfeeding, disease, or parasites puberty is delayed.

With regard to nutrition, low dietary energy levels can lead to ovarian inactivity.

Inadequate protein intake and nutritional problems leading to anemia can cause silent or irregular heats. Deficiencies of phosphorus, vitamin A and E may also affect reproduction. Heifers approaching breeding age should be watched closely for heat to insure that they are cycling. A veterinarian can examine heifers to determine which ones are cycling and also determine if there are any congenital reproductive abnormalities.

There are numerous advantages to artificial insemination and dairymen should consider breeding their heifers to the better AI bulls. The most important advantage is the improved genetic merit of the calves sired by AI bulls. Daughters of AI sires have at least 900 pound milk production advantage over daughters of non-AI sires.

A successful AI program involves routine heat detection and timely insemination. Although the average interval between heats for heifers is twenty days there is a normal range of eighteen to twenty-four days. Because considerable variation exists between animals, dairy farmers should record all heat dates on a chart so that they can anticipate future heats. To monitor heats accurately, heifers must be clearly identified with neck chains, large ear tags, or freeze brands.

Heifers should be checked for heat twice a day. If heat detection is routine and frequent, heifers should be inseminated twelve hours after the beginning of standing heat. When the onset of heat cannot be accurately determined, heifers should be bred soon after standing heat is noticed. Dairymen who cannot routinely check for heat should consider using heat synchronization and a concentrated AI breeding program for selected months during the year.

Heat detection aids, such as heat mount detectors, crayon or chalk markings, surgically altered bulls or androgenized heifers equipped with chin-ball markers, can make heat detection easier and more efficient.

When selecting AI sires to breed heifers, primary emphasis should be placed on production merit. From among these bulls, the choice should be further narrowed to those bulls with the least expected calving difficulty. Thirty-five to fifty days after insemination heifers should be ex-mined for pregnancy.

Accurate breeding records are important for predicting calving dates. Heifers close to calving should be observed frequently. They should be moved to the calving area several days to a week before the anticipated calving date.

The best calving area is a level, dry, easily accessible grassy pasture. A good alternative is a large, dry, well bedded maternity pen. Maternity pens should be kept clean and reserved solely for calving. Selecting sires for calving ease, raising heifers to adequate size and using proper calving management practices will minimize calving problems.

Franklin County Extension

Willard Scott Makes Presentation American Dairy Association Honors Martins

SYRACUSE, NY — In an effort to recognize a heritage of commitment and dedication to agriculture, the American Dairy Association and Dairy Council (ADADC) recently recognized Edwin and Elizabeth Martin of West Grove, PA with its annual Service to Dairying Award. The award was presented to the Martin Family by Willard Scott, the popular Today Show weatherman, during the Association's 29th Annual Meeting held February 22nd in Syracuse.

Misty Pines Farm has stood for nearly three centuries among the equine and mushroom facilities of beautiful Chester County. Founded a 1727, this Century Farm reflects a time past when homes and barns were built of stone and made to withstand the elements and fads of time. Like the buildings, families were also built solidly to preserve the values and ethics of those who had come before. Edwin and Elizabeth Martin are two such individuals who exemplify long-standing dedication to family and an age-old ethic that says the fruits of life come from hard work and dedication.

The home that has housed seven generations of Martins (including Edwin's mother, who passed away at 109 years old) has been standing relatively unchanged since 1740. Plank floors, heavy wooden doors and a beehive oven are just a few of the home's traditional characteristics, and the Martin's have tried hard to preserve the house where Edwin and his ancestors were born.

Edwin's farm experience came early, as he is fond of recounting tales of following behind his father's horse-drawn plow at the young age of eight. While plowing the fields and tending the cows, he dreamed of attending business school, a goal that he pursued and accomplished. But like many other ambitious young men of the time, the Depression quelled thoughts of a white-collar career. Instead, he formed what was soon to become a thriving marketing operation by delivering eggs, sausage and scrapple from a local butcher, rhubarb from a plant that still yields a scrumptious pie, and other home-grown produce.

But when his father, Edwin Seal Martin, passed away in 1952, this industrious agriculturalist placed additional time and energy into making the dairy thrive.

Mr. Martin talks of a time not so long ago when milk was hauled by horse and wagon to buyers from local dairies. Gradually, though, the operation grew until

BEST IN DESIGN, PRICE AND EXPERIENCE

Calving Older Dairy Heifers Doesn't Pay

BY LISA RISSE

LANCASTER — Raising heifers is often the second largest cost on a dairy farm. Farmers whose heifers freshen later than at 24 months of age are spending more money than they have to, according to Arlyn J. Heinrichs, associate professor of dairy science.

"Increasing the age of calving can cost $50 to $80 per animal," he told farmers who attended the second day of Lancaster Dairy Days this week. "The age of calving is where the profitability of raising heifers comes in."

The average age of calving for Pennsylvania dairy heifers is about 26 and a half months. "The average farm with heifers that freshen at 26 months spends about $2,025 to $3,240 per year due to poor replacement, feeding, and management."

Some farmers increase calving age because they know older heifers produce more milk. "The older heifers do produce more milk, but there's not much of a difference (in milk production). Twenty-four-month-old heifers produced slightly below 14,000 pounds while 26-month-old heifers produced slightly more than 14,000 pounds."

Calves from 27 to 32 months of age produced just about the same amount of milk as 26-month-olds, he added. A similar increase occurred in butterfat production.

Heinrich estimated that the out-of-pocket cost of feeding a 1,000-pound heifer that is gaining 1.5 pounds per day is about $34.80 a month.

"If your feeding costs are $34.80 per month, to hold a heifer until 25 months (of age before calving), the increased milk from this older heifer must be at least $34.80," he said. "When I looked at the feed prices of raising heifers, 23 months was the break-even point. People raising 25-, 26-, or 27-month-old heifers are losing money."

Decreasing the age of calving means taking a look at the operation's current replacement-heifer program. "But you can't work on your program without monitoring," Heinrich stated. "Look at your heifers' growth rate."

A weight tape is a fairly accurate measurement tool, according to Heinrichs. Charts are available from Penn State and extension offices that match ages with weights. Height also is an important measurement because it indicates the heifer's skeletal growth.

"Don't rely on the weight tape exclusively," Heinrichs warned, "you might just have fat, short heifers."

He also advised looking at heifers from other herds such as at shows. "If you don't get out and see other animals, you may not know what a young, healthy heifer looks like."

If a farmer notices that his heifers are calving past 24 months, feeding should be the first area of concern. Calves that are six months older or younger could be receiving improper nutrition because they're not drinking enough milk or milk replacer; the milk or milk replacer is being diluted; low nutrient content of the grain mixture; improper age when grain and forage are fed; improper types of forages fed; low intakes of grain and forage; or poor water quality or availability.

Hand in hand with good nutrition for young calves is starting the rumen functioning as soon as possible. "Grain and forage are most critical at this young age," Heinrich said. "Get the rumen functioning by limiting the milk fed at 10 percent of body weight maximum on Day 2. And a maximum of 10 percent of body weight of milk should be fed by weaning day. As the calf's appetite increases, increase the amount of grain and forage; at the same time increase the water supply, which encourages greater grain and forage intake."

Heinrichs recommended weaning at three to eight weeks: whenever the calf is eating 1 to 1.5 pounds per day of concentrate because it is at this time that they will not lose weight due to weaning. They may not gain weight, but they won't lose weight.

At 12 months, a heifer may not be gaining because of a lack of quality forage or a low forage intake, a poorly balanced ration, and low water quality or limited water availability.

Ionophores such as Bovatec or Rumensin have been proven to increase the energy efficiency of an animal by 5 to 8 percent. In other words, it better utilizes feed for growth. "If you use an ionophore, you can feed less of a ration and maintain the same growth or feed the same ration and improve growth," Heinrichs said.

The average rate of gains for dairy heifers is 1.7 pounds at six months and 12 months and 1.4 pounds at 18 months.

Heinrichs challenged the farmers not monitoring their replacement herd to go home and weigh six heifers: two six-month-olds, two 12-month-olds, and two 18-month-olds. "Weigh them today and one month from today reweigh them and figure out their rate of gain," he directed. "If their rate of gain isn't close (to the figures above) by one-tenth of a pound, I'd be concerned that they won't calve on time."

in the day linked to cash market weakness and sluggish fed cattle sales. Reports that fed cattle trade in the Texas Panhandle was at a standstill fueled additional selling interest along with expectations for lower cut values and light boxed beef movement. The discount futures hold to cash supported along with light commodity fund buying. Spillover weakness from live cattle along with another 21 point loss in the cash index pressured feeders to close 17 to 40 points lower.

CME FEEDER CATTLE SETTLEMENT PRICE: 03/04/89 -$82.35 03/03/89 -$82.56.

ACRES HOG UPDATE: Live hog futures closed out today's session mixed with the spot option unchanged and the others from 20 lower to 8 points higher. Today's session was featureless with pressure attributed to ideas of increased marketings and lower wholesale values. Support this morning was generated by firmer cash hog prices and lower than expected receipts yesterday.

however, a similar one has been re-introduced.

Farmers in townships that adopt the sample manure ordinance, or one similar to it, would be required to submit a nutrient-management plan to the township before expanding a current operation or beginning a new one. If the plan is approved, the farmer would receive a permit.

Expansion, according to the sample ordinance, can be an increase in the number of animals when the ordinance went into effect, an increase in the base number on the nutrient-management plan, or when, in one month's time, the herd is 10 percent or more larger than the average from the last five years.

Nutrient-management plans can be drawn up by the conservation district or Penn State extension agents with soil samples, yield goals, and the results of a manure test.

"It's not costing anything at this point (to have a plan drawn up)," said Heistand. "But if it becomes a state law, it could cost you."

Nutrient-management plans often involve building manure storage or changing the farm's configuration to avoid barnyard runoff. The cost of some of the changes required in a nutrient-management plan, as well as soil conservation practices, can be shared by LCCD conservation districts. Cost sharing plans include permanent vegetative cover, 50 percent of average cost; animal-waste management system, 50 percent of average cost; stripcropping and contour farming system, 80 percent of actual cost up to a maximum cost share of $8 per acre and 50 percent of obstruction removal cost; diversion system, 75 percent of average cost; waterway system, 75 percent of average cost; stream protection system, 50 percent of average cost; sediment retention and erosion or water control structures, 50 percent of average cost; soil and manure analysis, 80 percent of actual cost approved by district; and excess manure transportation, percentage determined by district.

Ag Secretary Wolff Announces New Lab

HARRISBURG
(Dauphin) — State

Agriculture Secretary
Boyd E. Wolff announced recently that testing for John's Disease, a chronic bacterial ailment affecting cattle, will be expanded and moved to the department's laboratory in Tunkhannock.

Transfer of the testing, now performed at the Summerdale laboratory, will enable the department to improve delivery of John's diagnostic service and make better use of the facilities, equipment and personnel at both laboratories, Wolff said.

The Tunkhannock laboratory is located at the Agriculture Department's Region 3 headquarters in Wyoming County. The Summerdale lab and Region 6
headquarters are in Cumberland County,
across the Susquehanna River from Harrisburg.

The move became possible when the U.S.
Department of Agriculture assumed responsibility for market-cattle tests, which had been conducted by the department at Tunkhannock.

This allows two technicians and a laboratory assistant at Tunkhannock to perform the John's Disease testing in addition to continuing a milk-ring test, Wolff said. John's
Disease affects the animal's general health and milk production but it is not passed along to humans.

The Summerdale facility, which is the department's central animal diagnostic laboratory, has strained to keep up with an increasing workload brought on by increasing producer concern about John's Disease,
Wolff said.

Consequently, there is a backlog of John's testing, which is a time-consuming process requiring up to 14 weeks to complete.

Wolff said the increased testing will bring the department a step nearer to a goal of eventually certifying herds as testing free of John's Disease.

Lebanon County Holstein Club Annual Tour

This year's tour will be to Franklin County on March 16, 1989. The bus will be leaving the Fisher Bus parking lot at 7:30 a.m. and will return at approximately 6:30 p.m. Following is a list of the scheduled stops.

Alvin Meyers Farm: Meyers is currently milking 55 cows with a 19,309 lb. herd average and 739 lb. of fat. He has an BAA of 105.7 with 5 excellent cows.

Fred & Dale Rice Farm: The Rices are 1989 Pennsylvania Master Farmers. They are milking 186 cows in a new double 10-perpendicular milking parlor. Their operation also includes a drive through a feeding barn and a step gravity flow system in the free stall barns.

Harold F. Crider and Sons Farm: The Criders have been doing ET work since 1981 and have done extensive merchandising with offspring. Currently they have a BAA of 105.3 with 10 Excellent cows and a 17,000 lb. herd average.

Oakleigh Farm: Ed and John Brake milk 117 cows which are currently averaging 21,000 lbs. of milk and 810 lbs. of fat. They are starting some ET work and have a BAA of 103.8.

Remember the date is March 16th. You should contact Dale Himmelberger, Amos Balsbaugh, or Dale Hoover to reserve your seat. The cost is $18.50.

Accent on Youth Sale

It has been decided to continue this spring calf sale. The sale will be held on Thursday evening, April 13, 1989. As last year, it will be an all breed sale. The sale will not be a donation sale. Approximately 10% will be assessed the consignor. The sale is not meant to be a money making project and if there is money left over after the expenses have been paid, it will be returned to the consignors. The committee is looking for calves that can be used by the area youth as show projects; but may also accept additional animals. If you have questions or consignments, please contact one of the following committee members:

Alan Hostetter- 867-2962
Dale Maulfair- 865-6439
Gary Mase- 274-5331

200 Farmer-Delegates To Gather In Syracuse For Eastern Meeting

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Eastern Milk Producers Cooperative will hold its semi-annual Delegate Meeting on Tuesday, March 14, at the Hotels at Syracuse Square in downtown Syracuse.

Over 200 farmer-delegates representing 3,200 farm families in nine states are expected to attend, according to the meeting organizer, Anthony Schlesier, who is manager of cooperative relations.

He said the delegates will meet in closed-door sessions all day to review the co-op's operations for the past year, to hear projections for the coming year, and to discuss policy direction for the co-op.

Eastern Milk is a leading Northeast dairy cooperative, with a high concentration of farmer-owners in New York, Pennsylvania and Vermont. The co-op also serves members in New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Connecticut, New Jersey, Delaware and Maryland.

In 1988 Eastern marketed about 2 billion pounds of milk -- supplying raw milk to some of the largest cheese manufacturers in the country as well as an extensive list of regional fluid processors and product manufacturers.

Eastern also operates six dairy stores, and a truck route system for delivering an extensive array of products to 30,000 rural customers in a dozen states.

Forage, Grassland Council Plans Hay Auction

BELLEVILLE (Mifflin) — The Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council will be sponsoring the Hay Auction to be held Monday, March 20, at 1:00 p.m. All hay to be sold will be NIR tested and consignors are requested to have hay in place by noon the day of the sale.

The sale will be held at Plum Bottom Farm in Belleville, Pennsylvania. The farm is located three miles northeast of Belleville along the Back Mountain Road. Any problems or questions concerning the sale, call 717/935-5242.

All hay will be sold by the ton and a nutrient test will accompany each load. Any and all size loads are welcomed. There will be a $2 per load fee to help defray the cost of the NIR testing.

American Dairy Association

additional tanks were needed for storage and a new milk house was added onto the 1848 double-decker Quaker barn. Gracing this new facility was a used milk tank that was purchased from Pulitzer-prize winning author Pearl Buck's own dairy facility. For many years these tanks served Edwin's herd of 80 Holsteins, and a yield of 2,500 lbs. of milk per day - a highly productive herd in those days.

The barn and surrounding acreage are no longer bustling with a large herd of dairy cows, but the 80 year old Edwin still cares for several head of calves and replacement heifers. Asked about his advice for today's dairy farmer, Mr. Martin replied, "Always be sure that you can see your way clear in any business situation. What I mean to say is, don't go over your head and always live true to your word. Dairy farming is an honorable business that I've been proud to call my own. Another thing they must treasure and protect is our farm land. Places like Misty Pines should never be just only about our past, but should always hold a place in our country's future."

One winner each from Pennsylvania, New York and New Jersey was chosen for this award. Participating families were required to have a history of continuous agricultural operation on the original farm. Applicants were solicited through the farm press, the County Extension Services and the Century Farm program.

The American Dairy Association and Dairy Council (ADADC) is a dairy promotion organization representing dairy producers from New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

Baltimore Farm Credit Bank Reports Growth

BALTIMORE, MD — Increased net earnings and loan volume growth reflect improved competitiveness by the Farm Credit Bank of Baltimore along with economic expansion in the mid-

Atlantic region, according to year-end financial data released today by the Bank which leads the region in agricultural lending.

Combined net earnings of $65 million were recorded for 1988 on the $2.6 billion loan portfolio of the Bank and its 19 affiliated local Associations. The 1988 data showed a significant increase over 1987 net earnings of $10.5 million, largely attributable to accounting adjustments, a four percent increase in total volume of real estate loans, and a 9 percent increase in commercial loans.

Bank officials reported the $65 million in net earnings reflects a $59 million reversal of loss sharing assistance payable to other Farm Credit System Banks which was originally charged to 1986 earnings. The 1988 net earnings also include new financial assistance expenses of $7 million which were provided during the year as required by the Agricultural Credit Act of 1987.

"We're extremely pleased with the economic growth of the region's agricultural sector and with the performance of the Bank and the Associations," said Gene L. Swackhamer, President of the Farm Credit Bank of Baltimore.

He said the 1988 increase in loan volume reversed a trend of declining loan volume that began in 1984.

"It is particularly gratifying that this good news comes after a summer that produced drought conditions in many parts of our district," Swackhamer added. "This demonstrates the underlying strength of agriculture in this region which is based largely on diverse farming operations, off farm income sources, and sound, conservative management practices of the farmers we serve."

Higher commodity prices and income from government programs also helped offset crop losses in many drought stricken areas, according to Bank reports.

Year-end operating reports included loan delinquency data which confirmed the strengthening financial position of the region's farmers. The delinquency rate for farm real estate loans was 3.9 percent of the number of borrowers and 2.8 percent of commercial loans at year-end 1988. Delinquency rates for 1987 were 4.9 percent for farm real estate loans and 2.9 percent for commercial loans.

On being a farm wife - And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

In 25 years as a "professional farm wife" (a term favored by a good friend), certain absolutes have been ingrained on my brain.

One of them is that nails lying around on paved driving areas are taboo, and generally create flat tires at most inopportune times. (Is there an opportune time for a flat tire, anyway?)

Thus, I have dutifully picked up over the years a hardware-store-worth of nails in various shapes and sizes. So when I spied the brownish head of a nail lying on the blacktop last week, I automatically bent to retrieve it from among the dusty residue of ancient roof shingles recently replaced.

This was not just any old roofing nail. Once shiny, it was now brown and pitted with many decades of age. But most astonishing about the nail was that it was shaped into a perfectly stylized letter "J."

My initial. On an old pitted nail from the shed roof. Why? What had caused a once straight nail to be formed like this? Delighted with finding what immediately felt like a sort of personal good luck charm, I cradled the curling nail into my gloved hand to show The Farmer. He surely would have some insight into its unique shape.

On the way from barn to house, stops at the ground cellar, greenhouse, bird feeders and woodpile side-tracked my thoughts. Some minutes later, I realized that my "J" nail of farm antiquity was missing.

Backtracking yielded no nail, just a couple more cats tagging at my feet. The nail was gone.

Disappointment at the loss of this novel piece of family farm history set me thinking about other small, commonplace items which have become personal "treasures." Some are worth little dollar-wise, but prized as bits of the heritage of our families.

Two old wooden buckets have served for years as magazine holders in the living room. The Farmer remembers them as lime buckets kept near the outdoor "facilities" before plumbing graced this old house.

A handful of fat, wooden pegs waits in a box in the attic for installation - some day - as coat hooks. Originally for barn use, their wood is cracked and aged to a soft silvery shade. How many halters and harnesses, old hay forks or crosscut saws might they have once held in their original use?

Old, worn horseshoes have turned up so frequently over the years that they got little attention - except for my wondering if horses ran barefooted around here when they kicked their shoes off. I plan to hang one over the door - another good luck charm. Tradition dictates a horseshoe be hung points up and curved side down, so the luck doesn't run out.

HERSHEY — When the planners of the annual Hershey Chocolate Festival in Hershey were putting together their February 19 event at Hershey's Chocolate World, they turned to the PA Dairy Promotion Program for assistance.

PDDP Promotions Specialist Lolly Long worked with staff at Chocolate World to develop activities for "Cows, Cows, Cows: A Moosical Event," which was part of the February 17-20 traditional chocolate extravaganza for guests at the Hotel Hershey and Hershey Motor Lodge and Convention Center.

"Hershey Chocolate is a major purchaser of Pennsylvania-produced milk," said PDDP Program Manager Donna Verner, "and we're pleased to help them with their promotional events however and whenever we can."

Games such as "Moosical Chairs" and "Pin the Tail on the Cow" were combined with activities to promote Hershey's new chocolate milk mix product. In addition to helping with ideas for activities and refreshments, such as chocolate cow ice cream sundaes and "How-Now" cow-shaped chocolates, the PDDP also lined up Dairy Princesses to give out information on milk, and loaned its film on Pennsylvania milk production, entitled "Lands of Milk and Honey."

MacRone Named Associate Extension Agent

UNIVERSITY PARK, (Centre) — Judy V. MacRone has been named an associate extension agent for Penn State Cooperative Extension in Delaware County. She joined extension as a program aide in 1985.

Her responsibilities as an associate extension agent are with the 4-H youth program. She teaches 4-H'ers the fundamentals of plant science and skills such as wood-working. She also oversees the Summer Specials program, a day camp where participants complete a 4-H project over a four-day period. She enjoys the variety of responsibilities in her work and likes visiting schools to present 4H programs.

Her favorite part of the job is working with handicapped children. "I thoroughly enjoy it," she says. "Even when I feel tired, working with those children makes me feel great."

She hopes to continue a hydroponics project started by the Philadelphia extension office and would like to see the 4-H youth program include more physical fitness activities.

MacRone, a graduate of West Chester High School, received her bachelor's degree in health and physical education from West Chester State College. Prior to joining extension, she taught health and physical education to kindergarten through eighth-grade children at the Torah Academy in Wynnewood, Pa. She also coached and taught health and physical education to girls in grades 10 through 12 at Lower Merion High School in Ardmore, Pa.

LEACOCK Coleman CENTER

Philadelphia Flower Show

Bursts With The Wonderful World Of Color

BY LOU ANN GOOD

PHILADELPHIA — Snow, ice and slush coated the city of brotherly love this week, but inside the Civic Center splashes of brilliant color greeted those who toured the Philadelphia Flower Show.

Brick terraces, patios, tranquil pools and wisteria-laden arbors enhanced ornamentals, fruit trees, shrubs, perennials, annuals and ground covers that creative gardeners fashioned for the event.

A gazebo framed by elegant displays of hybrid rhododendron surrounded by a hedge of white azalea showed the beauty of combining nature with designing talent.

Albrecht & LP Cowan, Narberth, built their sprawling "Over the Rainbow" display around ideas from "The Wizard of Oz®." There were thatched roofed houses and a bridge over a pond with lily pads and a winding road that creeps through hundreds of colorful flowers such as tulips, primroses, begonias, lilacs, gloxinia azaleas.

Once Country, Chester County landscapers, captured the PHS Flower Show award for the Best in Show of Commercial Aesthetic. A beautiful old Chester County barn with original walls was transformed into a gracious home and garden. The copper sunflower sculpture outlined the formal entrance court and thrilled the crowd with its breathtaking landscaped beauty.

Vick's Wildgardens showed that professional planting differs from random planting. Their display pictured Jake's campsite. Ferns, wildflowers and trees spread pungent woodland smells that mixed with the fragrance of hyacinths scattered among the displays. The camping gear, tents and cabin set among the campground added an authentic touch to the man-made woodland setting.

"Color Through the Season," designed by Waterloo Gardens, Exton, portrays a garden showing the colorful splendor of the four seasons, each seen from a different window of the house. The spring garden features the beauty of pink tulips, daffodils, grape hyacinths, English daisies, and iris, accented by pastel pansies. Bowles periwinkle ground cover blooms under a stately 22 foot oak. The traditional flowering shrubs and trees, dogwood, rhododendren and azaleas make up a stunning array of color thta only spring can provide.

The summer garden features late blooming Japanese dogwood, American elm, impatiens in an aura of colors, geraniums, petunias, snap dragons, daisies, dusty millers and more.

The conservatory style garden looks over the winter garden. Colorful orchids, and unusual bonsai and topiary specimens interspersed among red berried American holly and contrasting deciduous trees.

Window boxes for apartment dwellers showed superb suggestions for bringing color to city occupants.

Students from Delaware Valley College presented ideas for maintaining gardens through xeriscaping, an innovative landscape design to achieve water conservation.

Indoor floral designs and pictures with pressed and dried flowers offered competition for designers.

Quilts and flowers found their match at the show. Competition in "Patches of Color" required a flower arrangement complementing a quilt.

First prize in this category went to three Lancaster countians Sharon Bitner, Lisa Salcione and Debbie Sielski who created a quilt expressing the show's theme "Kaleidoscope — The Wonderful World of Color."

Custom-made for The Garden

Workers, a Main Line chapter of the Garden Club of America, the quilt featured a traditional barn raising pattern. The seven foot square mounted on a frame boasted a melange of colors. The quilt's center squares are soft tones of pink, gray, yellow and ivory radiating into more vivid shades of hot pink, red, orange and turquoise. A border combines the darker hues of purple, red, brown and black.

Arrangements interpreting a song title with the name of a color in it inspired floral designs with titles such as "Over the Rainbow," "Paint It Black," "Red Sails in the Sunset," "Blue Moon," "Nights in White Satin" and "Tangerine" which took first place.

Horticultural supplies, landscape materials, flowers, and myriad of related items were available for interested buyers. But the most intriguing part for most viewers was the landscape displays of which photos cannot do justice.

MICROWAVE MINUTES

By JOYCE BATTCHER

I got a letter from a reader asking me to send all of the low-calorie microwave recipes that I have. I couldn't do that because I have hundreds of low-cal recipes. But I can tell this reader — and you — how to make your own microwave recipes lower in calories.

Fat is the big culprit. Cut a tablespoon of fat from a recipe and you eliminate about double the calories that you would by cutting out a tablespoon of sugar.

The fat content of main-dish microwave recipes is often lower than in a comparable conventional recipe. That's because fat isn't needed to prevent food from sticking to the pan, as when sauteing onion and green pepper for combination dishes, or micro-baking fish fillets. Often the amount of fat can be reduced even more, or entirely omitted from your favorite microwave casserole or one-dish meal.

Fat can be reduced by half in most microwave sauce recipes. Again, fat isn't needed to prevent sticking; it's mostly for flavor. When reducing fat, add herbs and spices for enhanced flavor. Sometimes oil in a salad dressing can be partly replaced by water, as was probably done in creating Sweet and Sour Vegetables (below). Cooking soups, stews, and other combination dishes ahead, chilling, and skimming off any hardened fat before reheating is another way to lower calories.

Starting with lower-fat ingredients also makes a big difference in total calories. Use extra-lean for micro-stir frying. Choose center-cut pork chops instead of pork steak, top-round beef steak instead of sirloin. Trim off visible fat before cooking. Choose chicken or turkey breast instead of higher-fat legs, thighs or assorted pieces. Remove skin from poultry before cooking.

Get to know foods — which ones are low in fat and calories and which aren't. Read labels to find out ingredient contents. Here are two examples of how reading labels pays off. Low-fat yogurt is not all the same. Read the label to see if it's made with skim milk or 2-percent milk. Then choose the kind made with skim milk, or choose a nonfat variety. Some fats are better for you than others. Read labels and choose foods containing soybean or corn oils, rather than saturated palm or coconut oils.

Check past "Microwave Minutes" columns. Many of the recipes I've shared in the past years have been low-calorie. When a recipe isn't, look it over and you may be able to change ingredients to suit your diet.

Several years ago, I decided to include a nutritional analysis of each recipe. This is so you have an idea of the nutrients you'll get from eating a specific amount of a recipe. As in any diet or way of life, it's up to you to use the nutritional information to your advantage. If a luscious-sounding dessert is high in fat, you may want to make it only when you have guests — lots of people to eat it up so there are no leftovers — and cut your piece only half-size. If a recipe calls for an ingredient that you know contains lots of whatever you don't want, substitute another ingredient. For example, if you're concerned about sodium, substitute a can of lower-salt tomato sauce for a can of regular, or low-sodium bouillon granules for a regular bouillon cube.

My nutritional recipe analysis is approximate and is a guide only. It is based on the latest nutritional statistics. Where two choices of ingredients or amounts are given, the first is used in the analysis. Optional ingredients — listed as "(optional)" — are not included in the analysis. Two-percent milk is used unless otherwise stated. Regular — not light, low-calorie, low-salt or low-fat — ingredients are used unless otherwise stated.

The following low-calorie recipes are from a new booklet, "Fast and Fit." The 29-page booklet offers two pages of quick tips for success in microwaving, a power level conversion chart, a sweetener conversion chart and 23 recipes including soups, main dishes, salads and desserts. The recipes call for Sweet 'N Low heat-stable sugar substitute and ingredients that represent reduced fat, calories or sodium. Each recipe includes only a caloric content. Both are tasty and colorful. To order a copy of "Fast and Fit," send 75 cents for postage and handling to: Cumberland Packing Corp., 60 Flushing Avenue, Dept. PK, Brooklyn, NY 11205.

Sweet and Sour Vegetables (Salad)

- 1/2 cup red wine vinegar
- 1/2 cup water
- 1/2 cup vegetable oil

- 2 cloves garlic, minced
- 1/2 cup chopped fresh parsley
- 1 tablespoon chopped fresh or 1 teaspoon dried basil
- 1 teaspoon dried oregano
- 1 packet Sweet 'N Low granulated sugar substitute
- 1/3 teaspoon black pepper
- 1/3 teaspoon salt (optional)
- 1 small head cauliflower, separated into small flowerettes (about 1 pound)
- 3 carrots, sliced diagonally into 1-inch pieces
- 1 small onion, cut into rings
- 1 yellow or green pepper, cut into 1-inch squares
- 1 red pepper, cut into 1-inch squares
- 1 can (8 1/4 ounces) garbanzo beans, drained
- 4 green onions, sliced diagonally into 1-inch pieces.

In 3- to 4-quart microwave-safe casserole or bowl, combine vinegar, water, oil, garlic, parsley, basil, oregano, Sweet 'N Low, black pepper and salt. Add cauliflower, carrots, celery, onion and peppers. Mix well. Cover with lid or plastic wrap.

Microwave (High) 7 to 9 minutes, stirring once, or until vegetables are barely tender-crisp. Stir in garbanzo beans and green onion. Refrigerate several hours before serving. Makes about 10 (1 cup each) servings.

Each serving: 123 calories, 5g protein, 10g fat, 16g carbohydrate, 29 mg sodium, 0 cholesterol.

Questions for Joyce?

Do you have a question about microwave cooking? Send it to Microwave Minutes, c/o Extra Newspaper Features, P.O. Box 6118, Rochester, MN 55903. Please include a self-addressed, stamped, business-size envelope.

Recipes in this column are tested in 600- to 650-watt microwave ovens. With an oven of different wattage output, timings may need slight adjustment.

PICNIC PEANUTTY CARROT SOUP

1 can (10 1/2 ounces) chicken broth, plus enough water to make 2 cups
 1 cup thinly sliced carrots
 3 tablespoons butter
 1/4 cup each: chopped celery, chopped onion
 3 tablespoons flour
 1/2 teaspoon salt
 1 1/2 cups milk
 1/2 cup chunky-style peanut butter
 Simmer carrots in chicken broth in 1-quart covered saucepan until tender, about 20 minutes. Meanwhile, saute celery and onion in butter until tender, about 5 minutes. Blend in flour and salt until smooth. Remove from heat; gradually add milk. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, until thickened. Boil and stir 1 minute. Stir in peanut butter until well blended. Stir in carrots and chicken broth. Heat until serving temperature. Don't boil. Place hot soup in wide-mouth thermos for picnic use.

Cold Winter Weekend — A Soup To Warm You

When the weatherman forecasts a cold, snowy weekend why not prepare a recipe of Chunky Vegetable Chowder to satisfy your hungry family. We all know that a day outside in the cold and snow leaves you tired and hungry. You want to make a nutritious dinner without spending a lot of time.

Chunky Vegetable Chowder

10 ounces sharp Cheddar cheese
 3 medium red potatoes
 3 medium carrots, peeled and cut into 3-1/2-inch lengths.
 2 stalks celery, cut into 3-1/2 inch lengths
 4 sprigs fresh parsley
 4 slices bacon, crisply cooked and cut into 1-inch pieces
 1/4 cup all-purpose flour
 1/2 teaspoon dry mustard
 1/4 teaspoon paprika
 1/4 teaspoon savory
 1/4 teaspoon hot pepper sauce
 1/2 cup water
 4 cups milk
 1 package (10 oz.) frozen peas, thawed
 Shred cheese and potatoes. Remove from bowl and place in 3-quart saucepan.
 Slice carrots and celery. Remove from bowl and add to potatoes. Add parsley and bacon.
 Blend flour, dry mustard, paprika, savory, hot pepper sauce, and water.

Add milk to vegetables and bring to boil over medium high heat. Reduce heat, cover and simmer 10 to 15 minutes or until vegetables are tender, stirring occasionally. Add peas and flour mixture to vegetables.

Bring to a boil over medium heat, stirring constantly. Cook for 1 minute. Remove from heat and add cheese, stirring until melted. Serve immediately.

Yield: 8 to 10 servings.

QUESTION — V. Martin, Springfield, VA., requests a recipe for cheese curls.

QUESTION — Mrs. Stanley Owens, Beech Creek, requests recipes for oat bran muffins. Although we published several of these lately we continue to get requests from new readers. Those who have tried the recipes, send in the best.

QUESTION — Jean L. Mitchell of Lewisburg is looking for a recipe for pecan cheese cake similar to what is served in a Mifflinburg restaurant.

QUESTION — Doris Tressler of Gettysburg would like a recipe for pickled whole green tomatoes. She used to buy them in the grocery store but can't find them now.

QUESTION — Mrs. W. Paul, Burlington, N.J., requests a recipe for rice pilaf.

Secret Ingredient For Soft Cookies

What makes cookies soft and chewy is a sweetener called fructose or fruit sugar. Fructose is a natural sugar found in honey, fruits and berries. It attracts and absorbs moisture.

Fructose is available in health food stores and most supermarkets in the section where diet and no salt products are sold. It is available in liquid or granulated packages—use only granulated for baking. The price has lowered in recent years. Fructose is sweeter than regular sugar so use smaller amounts. It browns quickly so keep a close watch toward the end of baking time.

Cookies made with fructose are great for gifts especially those away at college because the cookies arrive soft and keep well in a cookie tin.

Soft Coconut Cookies

2½ cups flour
½ teaspoon baking soda
1 cup butter or margarine at room temperature
1 cup packed light brown sugar
¼ cup granulated fructose
1½ teaspoons vanilla
2 large eggs
2 cups flaked or shredded coconut
1½ cups chopped toasted and cooled nuts, optional
Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Mix flour and baking soda. In a large bowl beat butter, sugar, fructose and vanilla with electric mixer on medium speed until fluffy. Beat in eggs until well blended. With wooden spoon, stir in coconut and nuts.

Drop by heaping tablespoons, 2 inches apart on ungreased cookie sheet. Bake 10 to 12 minutes or until golden brown.

Cool on cookie sheet for one minute before removing to cooling rack. Makes 42 large cookies.

Soft Oatmeal-Raisin Cookies

3 cups quick-cooking oats
1 cup flour
½ teaspoon baking soda
½ teaspoon salt
¾ cup butter or margarine
1 cup granulated sugar
¼ cup granulated fructose
1½ teaspoons vanilla
1 large egg
¼ cup water
1 cup raisins
1½ cups chopped walnuts, toasted, optional

Heat oven to 350 degrees. Mix oats, flour, baking soda and salt. In large bowl, beat butter, sugar, fructose and vanilla with electric mixer on medium speed until light and fluffy. Beat in egg and water until blended. With mixer on low, gradually add flour mixture, beat until well blended. With wooden spoon, stir in walnuts and raisins.

Drop heaping tablespoons, 2 inches apart, on ungreased cookie sheet. Cool one minute, before removing. Bake 10 to 12 minutes or until golden brown. Makes 36 large cookies.

These cookies become even more moist after a day in the cookie tin. Layer with wax paper to prevent sticking together.

ANSWER — Patricia Underwood, Westmoreland County, requested a recipe for peach crumb bread similar to that baked by Shady Maple in East Earl. Thanks to Belinda Myers of Dallastown for sending in hers, which she is not sure if it tastes like Shady Maple's bread.

Peach Bread

1½ cups sugar
½ cup shortening
2 eggs
2¼ cups fresh peaches, chopped finely
2 cups flour
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 teaspoon baking soda
1 teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 cup finely chopped pecans

Cream sugar and shortening. Add eggs and mix well. Add peaches and dry ingredients; mix thoroughly. Add vanilla and chopped pecans; stir until blended. Pour into two regular size loaf pans (about 5x9 inches) that have been greased and floured. Bake in 325-degree oven for 55 minutes to 1 hour. Let cool before removing from pans.

ANSWER — Mrs. Glenn Martin, Ephrata, requested recipes for sesame stix and sesame candy and other recipes using sesame seeds. Thanks to Carol Johnson of Lebanon and Mrs. Eugene Martin of Newburg for sending their in theirs.

Sesame Almond Brittle

1 cup sugar
½ cup light corn syrup
1 4½-ounce can blanched whole almonds (1 cup)
¾ cup sesame seeds
1 tablespoon butter or margarine
1½ teaspoons baking soda
1 teaspoon vanilla
¼ cup water

Lightly grease cookie sheet. Set aside. In 2-quart sauce pan, heat sugar, corn syrup, and water over medium heat until sugar dissolves, stirring constantly. Stir in almonds and sesame seeds. Using candy thermometer, cook until it reaches 300 degrees, about 30 minutes, stirring occasionally. It should be at the hard crack stage: drop of mixture will separate into hard threads in cold water.

Remove from heat. Stir in butter, baking soda, and vanilla. Quickly pour mixture onto cookie sheet and spread and pull out to ¼-inch thickness. Allow to cool for 40 minutes before breaking into pieces. Keeps well for one week. Makes 1¼ pounds.

Sesame Seed Brittle

1 cup corn syrup
1 cup sugar
1 tablespoon butter
¾ teaspoon salt
½ cup sesame seeds
Combine syrup, sugar, butter and salt. Cook over medium heat until it reaches 254 degrees, or the hard-ball stage. Add sesame seeds, stirring constantly until it reaches 305 or 310 degrees. Spread thinly on greased cookie sheet. Cool and break into pieces.

Peanut Butter

CREAMY CHOCOLATE PEANUT BUTTER PIE

1 package (3½ ounces) chocolate pudding and pie filling.
1½ cups milk
1 prepared chocolate-flavored crumb crust
1 cup whipping cream, divided
2 tablespoons creamy-style peanut butter
1 tablespoon Confectioner's sugar

½ teaspoon vanilla extract
Whole peanuts

Prepare pudding according to package directions using 1½ cups milk. Cool slightly; pour into crust. Refrigerate 1 to 2 hours, or until pudding has become firm. Combine ½ cup whipping cream, peanut butter, sugar and vanilla in small mixer bowl. Whip until stiff. Spread over chocolate layer. Refrigerate at least 2 hours. Just before serving, whip remaining whipping cream. Pipe through pastry tube fitted with fluted tip around outer edges of pie. Garnish with whole peanuts.

PEANUT BUTTER TANDY CAKE

4 eggs
2 cups sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 cups flour
1 teaspoon baking soda
1 cup scalded milk, use hot
2 tablespoons soft butter
12-ounce jar creamy-style peanut butter

2 8-ounce milk chocolate bars
Grease and flour a large jelly roll pan, 18x12 inches. Preheat oven to 350 degrees.

Mix together eggs, sugar, and vanilla. Add flour and baking soda to first mixture. Next add scalded milk and butter. Pour into pan and bake for 17 to 20 minutes.

When cake is done, remove from oven and spread peanut butter on top of warm cake. The peanut butter spreads more easily when spoonfuls are put all over the cake. Chill until peanut butter is firm.

Melt chocolate and spread evenly over cake. Chill until chocolate is hard. Cut into pieces and store in airtight container.

PEANUT BUTTER FINGERS

¾ cup butter or margarine
¼ cup sugar
¼ cup brown sugar
1 egg
¼ cup peanut butter
¼ teaspoon baking soda
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon vanilla

1 cup flour
1 cup quick oats
1 cup chocolate chips
¼ cup Confectioner's sugar
¼ cup peanut butter
2-4 tablespoons milk

Cream together butter, sugar, and brown sugar. Blend in egg, ¼ cup peanut butter, baking soda, salt, and vanilla. Stir in flour and quick oats. Spread in greased 9x13-inch pan and bake in 350-degree oven for about 20 minutes, or until brown. Sprinkle chocolate chips over top immediately and let stand five minutes before smoothing out chocolate. Mix Confectioner's sugar, peanut butter, and milk. Drop by spoonful and spread to give marbled effect.

ANSWER — Ruth Cantello, Somerset, N.J., requested recipes using honey for both entrees and desserts. Thanks to Anna Martin of Reinholds and Nadine Pollak for sending in theirs.

Honey Chicken

1 cup honey
 1/2 cup soy sauce
 2 tablespoons oil
 2 tablespoons catsup
 1/2 clove garlic, chopped
 3 pounds chicken wings, drumsticks and thighs also can be used

Sprinkle chicken with salt and pepper. Mix all ingredients and pour over chicken. Bake one hour at 350 degrees.

Honey Chicken

1/4 cup melted butter
 1/2 cup honey
 1/4 cup mustard
 3 tablespoons lemon juice
 1 1/2 teaspoons paprika
 1 2 1/2 - to 3-pound chicken, cut up and skinned
 Salt, pepper to taste
 Combine butter, honey, mustard, and paprika, stirring well. Lightly sprinkle chicken with salt and pepper. Place chicken, meaty side down, in a lightly greased 12x8x2-inch glass baking dish. Pour honey mixture over chicken, cover dish and refrigerate 3 to 4 hours. Remove chicken from refrigerator; bake covered at 325 degrees for 30 minutes. Remove cover and turn chicken. Bake 30 minutes basting occasionally.

Home-Based Business Workshop Planned

YORK — Have you developed a business plan for your home business? Are you familiar with the legal aspects of owning and running a home business? If you can say no to either of these questions, then the "Home Based Business Workshop" being offered by the Penn State Extension Service in York County may be for you.

The workshop will be offered Tuesday, March 21, in the conference center of the administration building at Penn State University York Campus. Registration with coffee and pastry will begin at 9:30 a.m.

At 10:00 a.m. the workshop, Developing a Business Plan for Your Home Business, will be presented by Benjamin B. Stigelman, an outreach consultant for the Pennsylvania State University at Harrisburg Small Business Development Center. Mr. Stigelman received his B.A. in Government and Public Administration and his M.B.A. in Marketing and Finance from The American University, Washington, D.C. His experience includes corporate planner and market research analyst for American Olcan Tile Co., Vice President and Director of Marketing Research for Hamilton Bank, and at the present, president of the American Needlework Company. He will provide various forms of business plans and discuss the importance they play in establishing a business.

Following a buffet lunch, John C. Becker, Esquire and Associate Professor Agriculture Economics, Penn State University will present information for the home business on a business name and licensing, legal composition, how to deal with local, state and federal regulations, liability and insurance, zoning and contracts. Time will be available for questions after and during both presentations. The program should conclude at 3:00 p.m.

Advance registration is required and attendance is limited. To register contact Penn State Extension Service, York County, 112 Pleasant Acres Road, York, PA 17402. The cost for the day is $10, which includes the workshop, morning refreshments, lunch and handouts. Make checks available to Extension Service Special Fund. For further information concerning the workshop and registration call A. Joan Lamberon at the Extension Office, 757-9657.

Hi! My name is Ellen Brubaker. I am 14 years-old. There are 10 children in our family: Pauline, 19; Mark, 17; Florence, 15; Ellen, 14; Martha, 11; Steven, 9; Marion, 7; Norman, 5; Laura, 4; David, 2; Dad (Walter), 33; and Mom (Vera), 32.

We live on a farm. We have 2 cows, 1 calf, 3 horses, 20 big pigs, 10 baby pigs about 30 steers, 1 dog, 10 cats, 2 barns and 1 house. We have a pond. We go swimming, skating and fishing. My sister Pauline is a teacher in New York. My other sister went to visit her. I am in 8th grade. I will be out of school next year. My mom was filling the wash machine with hot water, the hose busted and the water hit her. She burned her hand and down the front of her body. For awhile, she did not help much and did not go away.

We do not have home work unless we are not done with our work for the next day because we have to help with the chores. I milk the cows.

We go to a one room school. We go to school with the school bus. We drive a horse and buggy. We do not have a TV or a radio, but we have a telephone. We use tractors in the fields. We have a big farm, 160 acres with a lot of woods. My dad is putting in a new bathroom.

We have 36 pupils in school. One day we took our lunches to school, but we did not pack them. When lunchtime came, we put up our hands and said our lunch boxes are empty. The teacher sure was suprised. Then, one of the school parents brought our lunches to school. Our teacher's name is Esther Mae Hoover. I like school.

Hi! My name is Carol Martin. I am seven-years-old. I have a dog. Her name is Buffy. I have two sisters and three brothers.

I go to Penns Creek School. There are six grades. I'm in second grade. My twin brothers are in third grade. Some of my class is on the honor roll and I am too.

My daddy has 30 cows. One day we went on a picnic and we went on a walk in our woods. When we came back, we saw bear tracks! Last Sunday we got a baby calf. Now, feeding the baby calf is my brother's job. I like to read Kids Korner every week. It is fun.

Dear Readers,

This happened one Friday evening. I'm not sure what the date was, but it happened sometime in October. One of our best horses got killed on Route 372, a busy road.

My brother Benuel had wanted to put him in his stall, but just as the horse got loose, he ran down to the road. We didn't think that this would be the last time we would see him run. His name was Tony and he was a strong horse. We still miss him very much.

My name is Sarah Elizabeth. I am in the fifth grade. I go to Highland School. I am 10 years old. My birthday is May 26. I have two brothers Amos, age 14; Benuel, age 12; and four sisters: Elsie Mae, 18; Mary, 7; Malinda, 5; and Anna, 2.

I also have a pet guinea pig named Cindy. She is about three months old now.

With love,
Sarah Elizabeth,

pick on utility poles? According to National Wildlife magazine, the restless drillers apparently have found that the wooden columns holding up telephone and power lines are perfect for pecking. Accordingly, the pole-busters have become a peck of trouble.

Birds are launching beak attacks on poles throughout much of America. Of all the damaged high-voltage transmission poles the Alabama Power Company had to replace during a recent three-year period, for example, 42 percent had been damaged by woodpeckers. Yet, it seems, some poles are more popular than others, and the birds can be maddingly particular. Not long ago, South Central Power in rural Ohio had to replace one pole three times, at a cost of $35,000. Now helicopter crews check the pole every month.

Joe Brown, a transmission inspector for the Florida Power Corporation, thinks the birds' pole-pecking behavior stems from habitat loss. "Woodpeckers prefer large dead trees," he says. "But development removes these trees, and the closest thing to a dead tree is a utility pole."

Brown theorizes that some poles stand at junctures along migratory flyways, and that the compulsive percussionists use them as signal drums. Perhaps that explains the birds' fascination with one of his company's poles. In 1967, after replacing the pecked-to-pieces pole twice in nine years, Florida Power coated it with bird repellent. (Use of most chemical repellents has since been discontinued.) Still, the pecking continued. Crews had to replace the pole again the following year, and once more in 1970. Exasperated, they finally put in a steel pole. "We've had to repaint the steel pole three times since then because the woodpeckers still peck at it," says Brown. Meanwhile, two adjacent poles remain mysteriously unpecked.

In some places, the birds present only minor problems. But in Alabama, the Alabama Power Company is fighting an all-out war. Last year, the company spent more than $1 million replacing over-pecked poles. Now officials estimate that the birds ruin one of their poles every day. "Alabama is a major woodpecker habitat," explains transmission line supervisor Gary McCarthy. Naturally, the Alabama state bird -- the flicker -- is a woodpecker.

According to ornithologist Steven Sibley of Cornell University, woodpeckers are adapting to people in their habitat. During the mating season in the spring, males apparently try to impress females with their noise-making prowess. With fewer available dead trees, they seek out utility poles and other loud percussives. Says Sibley, "They've discovered that drainpipes and stop signs work even better than dead trees."

Power companies are busy devising defensive strategies. Many wrap their poles in steel or wire mesh. "But if a woodpecker really wants to get at a pole, he can get through that wire mesh," says Alabama Power's Gary McCarthy.

Even pungent wood preservatives seem not to deter the pests. The best defense so far? Concrete poles. "The woodpecker can't alight on them and get a grip," says McCarthy. However, he adds that the company has no plans to start replacing all wooden poles with concrete ones, which are more expensive.

Florida Power's Joe Brown notes that his company has tried tying artificial owls and snakes atop poles to spook woodpeckers, "but the birds soon figure out that it's not the real thing," he says.

Research is under way on ultrasonic repelling devices, though utility officials, respectful of the birds' awesome tenacity, are not optimistic. Many authorities are pinning their hopes on a new chemical repellent called ST 138, which awaits Environmental Protection Agency approval.

A pole belonging to Ohio's South Central Power Company once suffered so many woodpecker attacks that the company finally got permission from the state wildlife department to destroy the offenders. In the end, the idea was ruled out: "That would not be a popular decision," says manager Reno Robinett. "I also felt we should be able to outsmart the birds."

To Introduce the Fastest Growing Quality Shade Tree in America.

Hybrid Poplars At 1/2 Price

When you need shade in a hurry, we suggest the fast-growing Hybrid poplar. As shown in the picture — it has a handsome shape and will actually shade a ranch-type home in just 3-5 years! We haven't found any tree that grows like it. It has a spread of 30-35' and in just a few years, at maturity, it reaches 50-60'.

You Don't Have To Baby This Hybrid Poplar.

It normally lives 30-50 years. It is wind, disease, and insect-resistant. And it can take the cold as far north as Canada. This is not the short-lived Lombardy poplar. This poplar is often used to reforest after forest fires, and to reclaim land after strip mining. But, the best use is to provide beauty and quick, cool shade for new homes.

Plant Hybrid Poplars For Screening

The screen variety makes an ideal privacy hedge. It has a width of about 10' and grows to a dense screen usually in 3 years. Plant for quick windbreaks on farms and for living snow fences. We ship strong, 2-4' trees POSTPAID.

Lebanon County 4-H Livestock Members Review 1988

PRESCOTT (Lebanon) — Lebanon County 4-H'ers celebrated their achievements of the past year with families and friends at a recognition banquet last week.

The 4-H'ers honored fellow members for their accomplishments and expressed their gratitude to the companies and individuals that supported the clubs.

Secretary of Agriculture Boyd E. Wolff added his congratulations and discussed the importance of farmland preservation, tax reform, and the Animal Health Task Force to farmers.

The beef, sheep, and swine clubs gave special recognition to two individuals and two companies for their extra support to the clubs.

Representatives from Carlos R. Leffler Inc. received a plaque that was given in thanks for donating propane to help heat the building at the Winter Roundup. Farmer Boy Ag of Lebanon received a plaque in appreciation for donating the use of fans to the summer fair and heaters at the Winter Roundup.

Harry H. Bachman was given a gift certificate for donating his time and skills to the club's auctions. Judy Atkins received both a plaque and a gift certificate for serving as the leaders' secretary and doing most of the paperwork for club events.

The three clubs offered special honor to three members who they considered outstanding 4-H'ers. Eric Harnish of Lebanon was declared the outstanding senior member; Roxanne Kirst of Fredericksburg was named the outstanding junior member; and George Dice of Palmyra was selected as the outstanding rookie.

Many trophies were awarded during the banquet. The 4-H'ers that received awards were:

Have You Heard?

Does fat breed fat? Or do chocolate eclairs and potato chips make the difference? For years scientists have debated the cause of obesity, some saying it is hereditary and others claiming it is caused by environmental factors such as poor diet and lack of exercise.

A recent study over several years in Denmark strongly supports the theory that obesity has its roots in the genes. However, at this point we cannot ignore other studies showing that obesity is influenced to some degree by social and economic conditions.

Danish researchers traced nearly 5,500 adoptees and their biological and adoptive parents. They computed body mass indexes, measuring fat in all the children and both sets of parents. The researchers found a clear relationship between the fatness of the adoptees and their biological parents even though most of the children had little or no contact with their natural parents. The results also showed no relationship between obesity in adoptive parents and their adopted children, leading the researchers to conclude that body fat is controlled exclusively by heredity.

This study strongly supports the idea that we should focus our weight-control efforts on people at risk of becoming obese, rather than on the entire population. It is fairly easy to identify those at risk since 80 percent of the children of normal-weight parents are overweight.

However, other research with laboratory animals and people show that exercise and diet can influence obesity. The choices we make regarding exercise and foods, as well as our perceptions of socially acceptable body shape, play a part in determining how fat we are going to be. There is no simple solution to preventing or treating obesity, nor can we take that stance that it is all the fault of our genes.

Fresh Produce Consumption Booming: The fresh produce section in a typical supermarket is now about twice as big as it was ten years ago. The fresh produce section usually takes up about 15 percent of the total store size and often up to 200 items are stocked.

Why is this particular section of the supermarket expanding? Response to consumer demand! People are simply eating more fresh fruits and vegetables than ever before. Over the past decade, per capita consumption of fresh produce has risen 12 percent in the United States and consumption of canned foods has dropped about 15 percent. If this pattern continues in future years, Americans will eat even more fresh produce.

Some veggies are getting more popular than others. For example, Americans are eating 15 percent more broccoli and the consumption of cauliflower has risen 130 percent in the last ten years. Other big gainers were lettuce, celery, carrots and tomatoes.

Lots of factors contribute to our eating changes. The baby-boom generation is getting older and it's just natural to eat a bigger variety of foods as you age. Society is also becoming more health conscious and the desire to eat light and get lots of vitamins and fiber tends to draw people to fresh fruits and vegetables.

Consumers not only eat more fresh produce at home, they also want it when they eat out, as evidenced by the continued popularity of salad bars in restaurants. Modern consumers demand quick, low-cost, low-calorie meals and they are getting what they want.

Bulk Foods Growing in Popularity: According to a report in the latest issue of Family Economics Review by buying foods in bulk the average consumer saves 50 percent over the price of pre-packaged products. The USDA made a price comparison study of 36 items that can be purchased in either bulk or packaged form. What they found is 93 percent of the time packaged goods were more costly than the same food purchased in bulk form. Six percent of the time the packaged forms actually cost less than the bulk forms. Of course savings varied greatly according to the particular food in question and the brand, type and size it was being compared to.

For example, store brand all-purpose flour in a ten pound bag costs two percent more than bulk flour and store brand corn flakes cost six percent less than corn flakes in bulk form. So you see, you really have to watch to make sure you are getting the most for your money. As you might expect the largest savings in bulk over packaged food forms were for national brands in small packages. But when bulk foods were compared with exceptionally large package sizes (say a five pound bag) the bulk form may be more expensive.

Chester County Swine

The Chester County 4-H Swine Club is seeking new members for 1989. The club meets the third Friday of each month starting in March and continuing through August at the West Nantmeal Township building. Club members can raise from one to six pigs through the summer. Members are taught how to care for their animals plus other basics of livestock care. 4-H members are also taught how to give demonstrations and work together as a team in different projects.

For further information about the 4-H Swine Club, contact Titus Beam at 286-9579 or Nelson Beam at 286-9465. 4-H clubs are open to all Chester County young people ages 8-18, regardless of whether they live on a farm or not. For information about other 4-H projects, contact the 4-H office at 696-3500.

Food Producers Profit By Watching Lifestyle Trends

BY LISA RISSER

LANCASTER — Consumer lifestyles and eating habits change continually. Food producers benefit by keeping a close eye on these changes and altering their products accordingly. This was the message Alletta Schadler gave to poultry producers at the Poultry Progress Day last week.

"It is important to realize that how consumers act will impact your business," added Schadler, interim regional extension director for Penn State and formerly a home economist for Lebanon County.

For instance, reports of salmonella in eggs has caused many consumers to reduce eggs in their diets, while the report of lowered cholesterol levels due to oat bran consumption has caused an increased demand in that product.

"To understand what is happening in the food industry, we need to look at eaters and cooks," said Schadler.

According to a recent study on chicken and egg consumption by "Consumer Report", one out of three people are eating more chicken than beef. There are many reasons for increased chicken consumption including its reputation as a good nutritional source, clever marketing, and its low cost.

The magazine reported finding no incidences of salmonella and that all chicken sampled was good, although some was better than others.

In addition, the staff sampled free-range chicken, which is raised in an environment where it can roam freely, a growing condition favored by animal rights activists. Staffers found that the flavor was good, but not necessarily good enough to warrant paying its $6.98 per pound price.

The trend of people eating away from home is increasing at a slower rate than before. "The trend toward buying out and eating at home is increasing, however," stated Schadler.

In 95 percent of households, at least one person has eaten away from home each week, according to Schadler. About 62 percent of households bought take out food during a week. Of that percentage, 48 percent purchased food at drive through windows, 42 percent purchased food at a deli take-out, and 20 percent received home delivery of food.

Consumers traditionally have been lumped into several groups based on age and marital status and stereotyped accordingly. This is changing as groups now are composed of people with a variety of lifestyles and needs. Consumers are still categorized by age but advertising and marketing companies are careful not to stereotype any longer. The main groups are the elderly or "grumpies" (grown-up mature people), boomers, and teens/young adults.

Grumpies are adults who are 55 years and older. "For the first time in history, this group outnumbers teenagers," Schadler reported. "And people in this group don't like to be categorized as old people thereby making marketing difficult. Their lifestyles are very different than the same age group used to be."

Consumers in this group spend more of their income on food and 62 percent of them eat for gratification as compared with 48 percent of the rest of the population. They are nutrition minded, brand conscious, and price concerned. They want single portions and convenient-to-prepare foods. Taste is important to this group as their taste diminishes with age.

"Boomers is not one homogenized group," Schadler said. It is composed of married couples with children, singles, divorcees, single parents, and childless couples. This group also has different incomes levels, which brings different needs.

One boomer group that is growing is single person households established by men, according to Schadler. This group spends more money on convenience foods and includes many people who don't know how to cook.

Teens and young adults are quite different than they used to be in terms of food consumption and preparation. They are an important group for producers and marketers as they will be around for a long time.

"These consumers aren't receiving the same kind of training as they did a few years ago," commented Schadler. "They eat more fast food and convenience foods; they don't know how to cook." These consumers will need products with instructions and recipes.

On the other hand, there are many "latch key" kids who do the family shopping and cooking. These consumers aren't brand conscious and pick those that are deemed good buys.

Diet Consciousness

Health and nutrition are very important to today's consumers. Approximately 78 million Americans are using diet foods, and 54 percent of those began using diet foods within the past five years.

Fitness is in and calorie-controlled and caffeine-free foods are popular.

Microwaves are increasing in popularity. About 50 to 70 percent of households have microwaves. Children are comfortable with this technology, often more so than adults. There is continuing research being done to develop foods that cook completely in the microwave.

Alletta Schadler recently addressed attendees at the Lancaster County Poultry Progress Day. Schadler, currently the interim regional director for Penn State Extension, has served Lebanon County as a home economist for many years. Here she is helping to judge cherry pies at the Schaefferstown Folk Festival.

People who have been using microwaves for some time now are becoming impatient even with waiting for frozen or refrigerated foods to cook in the microwave. This is producing a trend toward shelf-stable foods that can be heated more quickly. An example of this is pasta in jars.

Consumers continue to be interested in fresh produce. They're also interested in fresh, ready-to-cook foods such as stuffed chicken breast.

Ethnic foods are popular and have become an $8 billion business. Chicken lends itself well to preparation in ethnic dishes.

Consumers seeking convenience continue to purchase prepared entrees. They want a variety of meals and look for those within 300 to 400 calories. There is a push for manufacturers to produce dinners with lower sodium levels.

"The things I think consumers want today are portion-size control, convenience, and new products," said Schadler. "They want health and nutritional information on the package, freshness, and recipes for the food."

By watching consumer lifestyle trends, food producers can change their products accordingly and always find an eager market.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

Often I feel that my life revolves around food. First I plant my garden in March, weed it all summer and I'm still harvesting in October. The vegetables are either canned or frozen and that occupies many of my days.

Then all year long, every single day, I'm planning meals for the men. Shall I bake a ham, fry hamburgers or grill a steak? Maybe we should have chicken, fish or hot dogs for a change. I always try to have variety in my meals. Potatoes are a constant though as I raised a lot of them last year. But, I'll admit that about now they are badly sprouted and wrinkled. So, we substitute rice, noodles or spaghetti.

I can't let 100 pints of pickles sit on the cellar shelf and so they appear regularly on the table. Another plentiful article is jelly and jam. They range from strawberry, peach and plum to blueberry, wineberry and raspberry.

And don't forget desserts. We usually have at least two each meal. Should we have pie and ice cream or would fruit and cookies go better with the meal? There is often a variety of puddings, custards and tapioca in the refrigerator. Fresh fruit salad is also a favorite. No wonder I must think about how much I am eating.

The other day I got an unusual seed catalog. It contains a description of old time garden seeds. The seeds originated from sources in southeastern Pennsylvania and were saved by families from one generation to another. These varieties had excellent taste rather than good keeping qualities that would allow them to be shipped.

One unusual seed is "Mostoller Wild Goose Bean." It supposedly was taken from the crew of a Canadian goose shot in Somerset County in 1864 by John Mostoller. It is thought the Complanter Indians grew this white, oval seed with reddish-speckled orange-brown spot over the eye along the upper Allegheny River. Some beans have names such as--Hutterite Soup Bean, Mull Kidney Bean and Sacrament Bean. There are even Risser Early Sugar Pea and Risser Sickle Pea seeds, which I gave the Landis Valley Museum's Heirloom Seed Project a few years ago.

Boots 'N' Saddles

The first meeting of the Boots 'N' Saddles Horse & Pony 4-H Club was called to order at 7:30 p.m. at the Farm & Home Center late last month. The minutes were read followed by a report on the club's community service project.

Elected as officers for this year are Melissa Harris, president; Sharon Harnish, vice president; Missy Overbaugh, secretary; Eileen Holm, assistant secretary; Becky Preiss, treasurer; and Kate Moxley and Eileen Holm, newspaper and scrapbook chairmen.

The Boots 'N' Saddles Club is a local club for those aged 8 to 18 that are interested in horses and ponies. The organization hold regular monthly meetings and plans various activities such as trail rides, horse shows, and clinics for its members. Ownership of a horse is not required. For information on joining the club, call 717/569-3068.

Dairy Of Distinction Program Called Beneficial; Seeks 1989 Applications Now

(Deadline For Applications is April 15, 1989)

HARRISBURG (Dauphin) — The Northeast Dairy of Distinction farm beautification program rewards clean, well-kept farmsteads to help with consumer acceptance of dairy products in the store.

At the recent annual meeting of the Pennsylvania division here, State Secretary Paul Nichols reported an increase in publicity for dairymen created by the Dairy of Distinction program in 1988.

For example, James Brubaker of Mt. Joy, a Lancaster County winner, and State President Everett Newswanger appeared on a state-wide syndicated public TV program. Also a "Philadelphia Inquirer" reporter interviewed Newswanger and several Dairy of Distinction winners for a story. And the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture sent a list of winners to all their news contacts across the state.

In 1987, Pennsylvania received 329 applications and chose 99 winners. In 1988, there were 229 applications with 94 winners. Letters of quality went out to all milk handlers. Two negative responses were returned.

Again in 1988, Governor Robert Casey declared a Dairy of Distinction week by signing a proclamation that was presented by State Ag Secretary Boyd Wolff at the reception for all winners at Ag Progress Days in August. At that time, LANCASTER FARMING presented color photographs to each Dairy of Distinction winner, too.

Edgefield Farms, owned by the Kenneth Rutt family, Quarryville, Lancaster County was one of the 94 state-wide winners in 1988. New applications for the 1989 program are now being accepted.

"Since we now have worked on the program for three years, the benefits have started to multiply," Newswanger said. "Not only does the extra favorable publicity in the general press help bring modern farm practices to the attention of urban people, it helps the farmer, too. Many winners use the distinction to promote their own operation or to seek and hire farm labor."

And now is the time when additional dairy farmers may apply for the Dairy of Distinction award. Also farms that had applied in previous years but did not win are eligible to reapply this year. The Dairy of Distinction farms are automatically entered for rejudging along with the new applications to insure each designated farm maintains the standard of excellence required by the program.

Pennsylvania has been divided into 10 districts. Each district has been designated according to its number of dairy cows. Up to 10 farm awards per district may be given each year. Deadline for entry is April 15.

Judging takes place in the month of May and is based on the roadside appearance of buildings, grounds and surroundings. A local district team of judges visits each farm and uses a score sheet to rate each farm. In the Pennsylvania program, in addition to this team of judges, the sanitarian for the farm's cooperative or dealer-handler will be asked to be part of the judging process.

Winners receive a colorful, 18x24-inch Dairy of Distinction sign to be placed at the entrance to the farmstead. In addition, as in past years, an 11x14-inch color portrait of the farm will be given to each winning farm in the Pennsylvania program by LANCASTER FARMING.

The Dairy of Distinction program is a cooperative, widespread industry effort. Sponsors include: milk promotion groups, cooperative extension, State Departments of Agriculture, the Grange, Farm Bureau, producer groups and agribusinesses. The program is run by volunteers at all levels of the organization.

Pennsylvania Districts

Pennsylvania is divided into ten districts. Approximately 10 Dairy of Distinction awards will be made each year in each district. There is no cost to the applicant.

As a winner, you will receive a certificate and a nice metal sign to put at the end of your farm lane. In addition, LANCASTER FARMING will present this year's winners in Pennsylvania with a color portrait print of their farm. If your farm is a winner, be sure you or your district committee takes a color photograph of your farm and sends the negative and proof to LANCASTER FARMING in time for the awards ceremony.

Pork Bowl Winners

For the third year in a row, Lebanon County's 4-H Pork Bowl team has captured the Pennsylvania Keystone Pork Bowl crown.

Daniel Atkins, 13, of Lebanon; Jay Kleinfelter, 16, of Myerstown; and Darren, 14, and Daryl, 17, Grumbine of Myerstown traveled to the Penn Harris Convention Center last month to compete in the fourth annual Keystone Pork Bowl, a hog-knowledge quiz, sponsored by the Pennsylvania Pork Producers Association and Penn State Cooperative Extension. All of the Lebanon team members belong to the county's swine club and manage their own swine breeding and feeding operations.

The Pork Bowl, held in conjunction with the association's annual trade show, the Keystone Pork Congress, featured competition from 12 4-H and FFA teams from across the state.

Coming in second place was the 4-H team from Chester County. Team members were Brian Beam and Chris and Norman Gay. Third-place honors went to 4-H'ers from Lehigh County: Steven Wessnes, Daniel Hartman, Travis Fink, and Wendy Lazarus.

According to Ken Winebark, county agricultural agent for Penn State extension and chairman of the event, the Lebanon County team came out of the gate running, posting a decisive 145-50 win over Big Springs FFA.

Teams were awarded points based on correctly answered questions in three phases. In all there were about 400 to 450 questions on the following swine topics: health, nutrition, housing and environment, pork quality, management, reproduction, judging, current events, and commodity prices. Prior to the contest those teams accepted for competition were sent a sheet with 250 base questions from which to study.

In the first round of questioning, each team member is asked a question. A second round of questions is directed at the team for discussion with the team captains answering the question. In the third round, the speed round, buzzers are used to determine who wins the opportunity to respond to toss-up questions. Here knowledge and quickness must work together. All questions are worth 10 points with five points deducted for incorrect responses in the third round.

Lebanon's team progressed through the semi-final round by soundly defeating the Indiana County 4-H team by 180-90. This win set up a rematch of last year's championship pairing with Chester County. With the pressure now at full force for the rematch, Lebanon County's 4-H'ers left little doubt in the minds of the Chester County players as to who the winners were as they trounced the Chester County team 125 to 20.

Only 12 of the 17 teams that wished to compete were selected due to time constraints. The teams were chosen according to the postmark date of their entry form. Teams competing in addition to those already mentioned were Greenwood FFA, York County 4-H, West Snyder FFA, Cumberland Valley FFA, James Buchanan FFA, Manheim FFA, and Chambersburg FFA.

All those participating in the competition extend their thanks to Hatfield Quality Meats for its financial support of the contest.

Anyone interested in learning more about the Keystone Pork Congress, contact Ken Winebark at the Lebanon County Cooperative Extension office, 400 S. 8th St., Lebanon, PA 17042; 717/274-2801, extension 350.

Wayne County Extension Committee Holds Re-Organizational Meeting

WAYNE COUNTY The annual re-organizational meeting of the Wayne County Cooperative Extension Executive Committee was held recently. A highlight of the program was recognition of Ellis and Daisy Dix for having received the Pennsylvania Master Farmer Award. Donald Olsommer and Robert Carmody, county commissioners, presented a special citation to Ellis and Daisy, which was read by Commissioner

Olsommer. In addition, Ted Kostige, president of the Wayne County Extension Executive Committee, honored the Dix's with a certificate from Penn State Extension. In addition, the slide presentation of the Dix farming operation, which was shown at the Pennsylvania Farm Show during the Master Farmer Awards program, was viewed. Three members of the Extension Executive Committee, Vernon

Crum, Philip Gottschalk and Fred Nordenhold were honored for having served two four-year terms on the committee with the presentation of a Penn State Extension certificate by Ted Kostige. Henry Antoniolli, William Bryant, Michael Nebzydoski, John Pawloski and Dale Teeple, who were elected at the annual meeting of the Extension Association last fall, were welcomed to the committee as new members. Also recognized were Robert and Judy Muller who were elected to a second four-year term. Ruth Funk, Penn State Cooperative Extension regional director for Northeast Pennsylvania, was present.

(717) 273-8090

Dear Walking Horse Friend,

I am very pleased to announce that due to a new partnership with Roger and Valerie Grimes, we will be able to offer many more services for our Plantation Walking Horse clients.

We are completing construction on a brand new 53 stall barn with inside riding arena and many other features.

We hope you can come celebrate with us at open house April 1, 1989 12:00 - 5:00 P.M. The schedule of events will be as follows:

12:00 Tour of facility - enjoy snacks and music with your friends

12:45 History and Development of the Tennessee Walking Horse- Dr. Bob Womack, author of the Echo of Hoofbeats.

1:30 Parade of yearlings sired by Queen's Black Allen.

2:00 Exhibition of 20-25 quality trail and show plantation horses - some spotted and palominos

3:00 Drawing for yearling and stud service to be given away.

Be sure to visit our tack store and take advantage of our special open house discounts. For those coming a distance, the following motels are available: Four Seasons (717) 272-8402;

See you at the party.

Best Regards,

REDESIGNED 1989 TIMPTE GRAIN HOPPER

Got Grain? Then get the trailer that is TimpTE tough... the Super Hopper. It's not only built to take it...it's also built to cut fuel costs. The Super Hopper is lightweight and aerodynamically designed to reduce wind drag. When there's grain to be hauled, TimpTE does the haulin' best and pulls a lot easier than the rest.

M.H. EBY, INC.

Box 127, Blue Ball, PA 17506 (717) 354-4971

An Eby grain body is surprisingly affordable and built for the long haul.

Reliable Eby livestock bodies are now aerodynamically designed.

Eby's bolt-on extends the usefulness of your pickup for minimal investment.

A chicken body built to keep your birds dry and protected.

Eby stake body is the right choice for farm or commercial use.

Consider an Eby bulk body for reliability and ease of use.

Aluminum Bodies for the Agri-Industry

Back in 1938, when Menno Eby Sr. began making wagons and cattle trucks, he was determined to give farmers strong, wooden truck bodies at a competitive price.

Some things change. Others stay the same.

Today, M. H. Eby, Inc. produces a wide variety of sturdy and reliable truck bodies for agri-business. Everything from livestock bodies through stake bodies to grain and bulk bodies. All at competitive prices.

But now every Eby body is all-aluminum. Consider some of the advantages you get over traditional wood and steel construction:

- As much as 50% lighter — allows for increased payloads.

- It will never rust through or rot.
- No need to paint.
- Overall maintenance costs are greatly reduced.
- Just an occasional power washing keeps aluminum bodies looking new for years.
- They have much better resale value.

What's more, you can always tell Eby what you want on your body. Everything we make is custom-built. A long list of options available for every body style allows you to design the body you need for your operation.

Give us a call, or write, to find out more about the lightweight alternative.

Robert and Helene Dreisback found Master Mix ProTek reduced their feed cost while boosting milk production by six pounds a day for their 87 cows.

We have been using Master Mix high energy feeds for a long time with great results. We switched to a Master Mix ProTek high energy feed to save $10 per ton. Along with feeding less protein, our herd average and fat increased significantly."

Topdress Master Mix
Protek® 1890's

"We started farming on our own in January of 1983. We were feeding a traditional 40% concentrate and rolled grain mix and our R.H.A. was 16,200 lbs. milk and just over 600 lbs. fat. In November of 1984 we went on the Master Mix Protek concentrate program. This program, along with better breeding and A.I. management, boosted the herd average 2400 lbs. of milk in the first year. So, by November, our R.H.A. was 18,600 lbs. milk and 671 lbs. fat."

"Then, a year and a half ago, we started topdressing the Master Mix Protek 1890's. The 1890's really help a cow milk to her genetic potential. The cows don't necessarily peak higher, but with the 1890's they hold their peaks a lot longer. They also keep their condition. The cows love the 1890's. In fact, they'll go for the 1890's before the rolled shelled corn."

We now have a R.H.A. of 20,252 lbs. milk and 715 lbs. fat. Nine cows out of 41 were milked over 100 lbs. in April. We are pleased with breeding and our 13.0 calving interval which isn't too bad considering the way they're milking. A good feeding program and good A.I. and breeding management has gotten us to the point where we are working with better cows, because we can now cull what we want to!"

Rodney and Jason Rankin milk 22 Holsteins and 22 Jerseys. They credit Master Mix ProTek 25 for their increased production. Master Mix cobactins, a microbial feed additive, also helps the Rankin herd stretch for higher production.

Rodney says, "We started feeding Master Mix ProTek 25 three years ago and have been increasing our production ever since. Master Mix ProTek helps keep costs in line, while we work for higher production. Six months ago I tried a conventional 38% concentrate. In three days we saw a drop in milk and test, so we're back to Master Mix ProTek to stay."

MAGNUM POWER

Four all-new tractors with four all-new engines.

In the field, power means productivity. And that's where MAGNUM tractor engines deliver.

These new engines are the products of the latest computerized design and manufacturing techniques. They're compact yet stronger. And they have 25% fewer parts.

With 505 cubic inch displacement, there's plenty of reserve power. What's more,

Stop In Or Call 717-626-4705
When You Purchase Magnum Quality, You Get 18 Speed Power Shift Which Gives You 3 More Important Speeds Than John Deere's 15 Spd Shift - So Why Not Stop In Soon To Get The BEST On The Market Today!?!?

Why Not Consider A New Case IH Magnum Tractor From Your Case IH Dealer - Binkley & Hurst Bros. Inc. - For An Enjoyable Spring!

MAGNUM tractor engines meet or exceed all SAE J1349 performance standards. Same for government and industry mandated emission standards worldwide.

Case IH put more into these engines than any farm tractor engine developed in the last twenty years. You'll get more out of it. More performance in the field. 130 to 195 PTO hp. See us for details.

MAGNUM means more.

COMPARE THESE FEATURES AND OPTIONS

Simple hydraulics allows one valve to operate the lift and stabilizer cylinders. Center plumbing means less hose length and easier coupling.

The basic box is heavy duty steel welded seams and reinforced for even more strength.

Standard offset hitch adjusts in 5 inch steps to lengths from 6' 3" to 7' 11". To allow for different row crop spacings you can offset either right or left 5' 7", 10' or 12 1/2 inches.

Rub rails offer more protection to vehicles when approaching during dumping cycle and when departing.

Galvanized roof features vent insert for straight through air flow.

The model 700 dump wagon is designed for years of trouble free service. The hydraulic system with a cable assist is designed to unload large loads of up to 20,000 lbs. quickly and efficiently even if the load is not distributed evenly.

Gehl's self-leveling lift action means less spillage.

Gehl's smooth performance makes fast work of bulk material handling.

Outstanding maneuverability and power handle any manure handling chore.

You'll use your Gehl skid loader to perform a wide variety of jobs.

A Gehl skid loader is a year 'round performer. It's the one machine you'll use every day.

GEHL

Gehl Easy Service Swing-Up Cages And Quick On/Off Bucket Attachments Were Designed With The Operator In Mind!

The rear grill swings open and the engine cover swings up for access to the engine, battery and filters.

The entire ROPS/FOPS structure pivots back and out of the way and locks in the "up" position for full and easy access to drive and hydraulic components. The spring-loaded, counter-balanced ROPS/FOPS makes rollback an easy one-man operation.

Attachment change is quick and easy. Simply line up the mounting brackets, roll back the lift arms, and lock the attachment in place. (Model 5620/6620 system shown. Other models feature a similar system)

Model 1465 Builds Bales That Are 5 Feet In Diameter And 45" Wide - A Simple "Air-Draulics" System Gives You Total Density Control Which Works Great!

LET'S MAKE A DEAL! STOP IN SOON!

Round bale silage. The concept of baled silage, or balage, is rapidly growing as an alternative to regular baling. It's ideal when weather conditions are unfavorable for quality haymaking. Gehl balers, with their ability to make bales of various sizes in addition to nearly infinite densities, are the perfect balers for making balage.

NOTICE! Case IH Tractors Give You More For Less - Look At This:

- (1) Case IH Hydraulic Pumps are larger and more efficient than other brands
 - (2) More front axle options than Deere or Ford
 - (3) Full hydrostatic steering not just power assist as Ford and others
 - (4) Synchronesh transmissions are standard equipment
 - (5) Case IH 85 series tractors have more weight for less cost
 - (6) Clear deck design means no gear shifts to straddle
 - (7) Heavier lifting capacity
 - (8) Independent PTO is standard equipment on all models, not just 2 stage clutch like other brands
 - (9) Diesel engines have replaceable wet sleeve engines (less cost)
 - (10) Dual shaft PTO on some models
 - (11) Case IH offers reverse shuttle transmissions with All Wheel Tractors where Deere and others don't

Full 10-year warranty on floor and sides

Heavy-duty gear boxes

Two heavy-duty gear boxes, one a 90 degree beater drive, the other a two-speed worm box with bronze gear and steel worm; provide efficient power transmission, smoother operation and long life.

Gehl-Tuff floor

In cold weather, the slick Gehl-Tuff surface reduces the force needed to break a frozen apron loose from the floor. So your whole load glides out with little resistance. And less apron pull means less wear and tear on drives and apron chains.

Krause THE FIRST ROCKFLEX DISC IS THE BEST

It Takes More Than A C-ARM BEARING Hanger To Make A ROCKFLEX DISC That LOVES ROCKS

Most disc harrow manufacturers, including Krause, are located in areas that do not have rocks like we have in Pennsylvania and Maryland. Because Hoobers have sold over 500 KRAUSE ROCKFLEX DISCS to Pennsylvania and Maryland Farms. KRAUSE knows what it takes to make discs that work and hold up for years of production in tough, rocky conditions.

Before You Purchase A New Disc This SPRING, You Should Try A KRAUSE ROCKFLEX DISC...They're Field Proven...

2242 Rockflex Disc Compare Features FOR CUTTING or FINISHING

- Heavy-Duty Gangs with 22"x6 Gauge Blades, 1½" Alloy Steel Tierod w/Nuts At Both Ends
- Staggered, Overlapping Front Gangs & Tapered Blades On The Outside of Rear Gangs
- Rugged, Extra Strength Scraper Assemblies

You Won't Find A Better No-Till Drill Than GREAT PLAINS

Call Us For A Demonstration

Great Plains Solid Stand® drills have the planting accuracy drilled soybeans need;

(1) Depth-Gauging Press Wheels keep the opener from penetrating too deep; planting depth can be quickly changed with exclusive dial-a-depth adjustment system. (2) Double Down-Pressure Springs hold opener firmly in the soil — preventing the bouncing action which leaves seed scattered on top of the ground.

(3) Special Seed Chute places seed in the very bottom of the v-slot, rather than allowing slot to partially close prior to seed release.

THE NO-TILL HITCH THAT WORKS

Here's why:

A unique pivot between the coulters and the drill allows each disk opener to track exactly in the slot cut by the coulters in front — even while the unit is rounding a curve.

Excellent penetration is also achieved, thanks to a heavy-duty framework, calcium-fillable transport tires, and a special weight transfer design which applies some of the weight of the drill itself to the coulters. Should additional weight be needed, specially designed weight brackets are available which accept most tractor suitcase-style weights. In all, up to 400 lbs. of weight per coulters is possible — ensuring penetration even in the toughest ground.

Finally, all Combination Drill Hitches feature a quick hitch for attaching easily to 3-point drills. So you have the flexibility to no-till some acreage, then switch back to a conventional seeding method as conditions vary.

The John Deere patented Concave Twisted Shovels are designed to enhance the soil, mixing action of a twisted shovel while increasing residue flow control. As soil "ribbons off" the concave off the concave twisted shovel, crop residue is moved to the side where plugging problems are less likely.

John Deere Concave Twisted Shovels make an excellent replacement for other brand chisel plows and mulch tillers such as Glencoe & Brillion.

Replacing tillage parts is part of farming. So stock up on these top quality John Deere parts at these low prices.

Twisted Shovels	Reg. Price	Sale Price*
John Deere 3"x22" 1/2" Thick Concave	$12.83	$10.25
John Deere 4"x22" 1/2" Thick Concave	$15.92	$12.80

All John Deere Shovels & Disk Blades are warranted against breakage.

Disk Blades	Part No.	Description	Reg. Price	Sale Price

TORQUE AMPLIFIERS & CLUTCHES

Over the past 8 years, we have sold thousands of T.A.'s to satisfied customers across the U.S. Some of our best customers are I.H. Dealers.

We do complete job or center housing while you wait or will sell you the parts.

Our prices on T.A.'s with the Dana Sprag, are now $645.00 with a 2 year warranty.

We also have units and parts available to rebuild old style T.A.'s, including Ramp & carrier sets for $300.00

Clutches, Pressure Plates PTO Drives & Water Pumps

We have clutches available for most all IH tractors; including many heavier than original. We also have clutches for many other brands.

- Compare Our Prices -

All clutches & T.A.'s will ship U.P.S. and are sold on an exchange basis. Core charges Apply.

QUALITY USED PARTS

We specialize in IH tractors but we also have Case, Oliver, White and Massey tractors in our inventory.

MOVE MOUNTAINS WITHOUT MOVING A FOOT.

Case Uni-Loader* skid steers not only out dig, out lift, out carry and out load most others they also take a big load off your feet. That's because speed, direction and all loader functions are controlled by two hand levers. You can maneuver easier and work faster. There are other advantages, too. self-leveling loaders, simple external chain-tension adjustment, separate hydraulic and chain/sprocket oil systems reduce maintenance and downtime. Let your hands do the working with a Case Uni-Loader skid steer the easy way to get a handle on tough chores.

Dry-flowable PROZINE. Costs less than Bicep or Lariat and gives superior control of the toughest weeds and grasses in corn.

PROZINE® 70DF corn herbicide delivers season-long control of major problem grasses and broadleaf weeds, including velvetleaf, triazine-resistant pigweed and lambsquarters, foxtails, panicums, wild proso millet and seedling Johnsongrass.

In fact, PROZINE does it all for up to $3 an acre less than Bicep¹ or Lariat.²

One application of PROZINE, applied pre-emergence or early postemergence, gives corn growers broad-spectrum control of grasses and broadleaves. Do NOT incorporate PROZINE in corn.

PROZINE is packaged in two convenient 20 lb. bags per carton. Its dry-flowable formulation makes it easy to mix and apply.

So get season-long control of your toughest

Composting Is Possible Solution To Dead Bird Disposal

BY LISA RISSE

LANCASTER — Disposal of dead birds is a growing concern among poultry producers. Conventional methods are becoming too costly, inefficient, and environmentally suspect.

Composting was the solution discussed at Poultry Progress Day last week by George Chaloupka, director of the University of Delaware's Research and Education Center. Composting is currently being explored by industry researchers in the Delmarva area.

The goals of the project, which is being carried out by the University of Delaware, University of Delaware extension, and University of Maryland, were to find a system that worked with a normal, year-round, mortality rate; fit a farmer's budget and into his daily work routine; was odorless and didn't attract flies; and produced a good fertilizer.

A shed was built that would handle 1,000 pounds of dead birds per day, an amount which would suit the needs of a producer with a flock of 150,000 to 250,000 birds.

The raw materials for the compost included straw, cake chicken manure, dead birds, and water. The amounts used, in layering order, were 1 part chicken carcasses, 1½ parts cake manure, 1 part straw, and 1 part water.

Before filling a section, a 6- to 12-inch layer of manure was spread on the concrete floor to absorb excess water. The birds were weighed prior to composting so that the other amounts could be determined.

Within seven to 10 days later, once the internal temperature had reached 140 to 165 degrees and started to drop, the pile was moved to a second confinement area for reheating. This activity mixed up the compost and added oxygen, both necessary to the composting process. About one week later the compost was ready for spreading or storage.

The project's researchers found that the cost of the shed, complete with concrete slab, was $5,000, a figure that would change depending on the building's size. The farmer, using a skid steer loader, spent about 20 minutes a day working with the compost excluding time spent in collecting the dead birds.

The final product was a compost that contained little evidence of its original materials, with the exception of a few feathers and bones. It was odorless and didn't attract flies. Organisms such as E. coli and salmonella didn't survive the process.

Research is continuing on the composting process to find out the compost's nutrient content, other sources of carbon, and marketing options.

"It may not be for every producer," said Chaloupka. "But the industry feels that it may become a practical solution."

HOT WEATHER AND THE BROILER HOUSE

BY FOREST MUIR

Professor of Poultry Science

Bird comfort is extremely important for maintaining productivity. Preparing the broiler house for summer conditions includes servicing the ventilation system and servicing or installing a misting evaporative cooling system.

SERVICING THE VENTILATION SYSTEM Inlets

Inlet openings are the entry point of fresh air into the poultry house. The air intake openings should be covered with screening of a size that will prevent wild birds from entering the building. The ventilation fans should always be pulling air through this screening. Thus, dust, feathers or other debris caught by the screening will not normally fall away. They only serve as obstructions to entrap additional material. This screening should be cleaned and maintained dust free to allow maximum air flow when needed.

Fans

Fans are the heart of the ventilation system. Establish a regular schedule for servicing the fans during the summer months. Proper maintenance can increase the air delivery capacity of a fan by as much as 30-40 percent. Proper fan maintenance includes:

- checking to make certain all fans are operational and have been lubricated if required.
- cleaning the fan blades, orifices, and motors.
- cleaning and lubricating (use graphite) the fan louvers.
- adjusting belt tension and replacing belts as necessary.
- stocking spare replacement fan belts.

Controls Dust should be removed from the sensing units of thermostats. Dust on these sensing units can act as an insulating agent and reduce thermostat sensitivity. Most broiler air inlet systems are regulated by automatic inlet controllers. These controllers use a manometer as a sensing device. The manometer in these units should be serviced. This includes checking the fluid level and calibrating the zero setting. Adjust the automatic inlet controller to maintain a .04-.06 static pressure in the building. Check the high temperature alarm to make certain it is operating properly.

COOLING SYSTEMS

If the broiler house contains a misting evaporative cooling system, this system should be serviced as follows:

- remove all nozzles and soak for 10-20 minutes in approximately an 8 percent solution of hydrochloric acid. This can be prepared by diluting common swimming pool muriatic acid 3:1 with water. Dilute the acid in a plastic or glass container. DO NOT USE A METAL CONTAINER. WARNING: ACID IS CAUSTIC - DO NOT GET IN EYES, MOUTH OR ON SKIN.

- remove nozzles from solution and rinse with water.
- replace nozzles.
- service the pump in accordance with the manufacturer's recommendation.

If you have not installed a misting evaporative cooling system in your broiler house and are considering such an installation, the following is suggested as a guide:

- a water supply in addition to that required for drinking purposes will be needed. The quantity of water required for the evaporative cooling system can be estimated by dividing the square footage of the house by 200. The answer estimates the gallons of water needed per hour.

- the misting system should be operated at a pressure of 200 psi to produce a water particle size needed for rapid evaporation. This necessitates a booster pump capable of increasing normal line pressure to the desired 200 psi.

- a 100 mesh filter should be installed to prevent particles from entering the misting system and plugging the nozzles.

- a pressure regulator is needed to maintain the operating pressure.

- corrosion resistant piping should be used to supply water to the misting nozzles. Rigid plastic pipe appears to be a good choice. Check with the supplier to assure the pipe can withstand a pressure of at least 200 psi.

- a drain should be provided so that water can be drained from the system when not in use.

- misting nozzles with a capacity of 1 gallon of water per hour at 200 psi should be used. The nozzles should be located near the inlets and the fog from the nozzles should be directed away from obstructions to prevent the fog from condensing before it has a chance to evaporate.

- after the pipe is installed, the system should be flushed thoroughly before the nozzles are installed to remove any debris from the line.

A small investment now in maintenance of the ventilation system and/or installation of a misting cooling system can pay big dividends when the first hot weather arrives.

Texas Charolais Show Champion Is Dempsey Daughter, High-Rise Son

HOUSTON, Tx. — Good weather, a great crowd and a strong 97-head show combined for a successful conclusion to Charolais activities held in conjunction with the Houston Livestock Show & Rodeo in Houston, Texas. Myron Graff of Osceola, Iowa, judged the 57 females and 40 bulls led out on February 24 in the American-International Charolais Association (AICA) Roll of Excellence show.

In the bull show, Graff selected an entry from Triple R Ranch of Franklinton, N.C., and Fox Hollow Farm of Tulsa, Okla. The bull, FH-RRR Sequoia 148, is an April 3, 1988, son of Silver Creek High-Rise. He stood as grand and junior calf champion bull. The reserve grand and intermediate champion bull was LK Colorado Cowboy 7135. The 1987 son of BR-MF Krugerrand T752 was exhibited by Dewey Charolais Ranch of Cimarron, Kan., and Thomas Ranch of Harold, S.D.

Perfections Tally II ET, shown by Willard Walker of Springdale, Ark., stepped into the champion's circle as grand and senior calf champion female. She is a 1987 daughter of BR-MK Krugerrand T752. Retherford Ranch of Prescott, Ariz., and Shallow Creek Charolais of Madisonville, Texas, exhibited the reserve grand and senior champion female, Yava's Elaine 702. The female is a 1987 daughter of Roxy's Jack Dempsey 63R.

Other champions in the bull show included the reserve junior calf champion, Omega Pontiac 8026 X ET, a March 4, 1988, son of BR-MF Krugerrand T752 owned by Christine R. Simmons and Omega Farms of Williamston, Mich. The senior calf champion

FH-RRR Sequoia 148, an April son of Silver Creek High Rise, was selected as grand champion of the Charolais Show at the Houston Livestock Show & Rodeo. The owners of Sequoia are Triple R Ranch of Franklinton, N.C., and Fox Hollow Farm of Tulsa, Okla.

The grand champion female of the Charolais Show at the Houston Livestock Show & Rodeo was Perfections Tally II ET, a senior calf. Tally is owned by Willard Walker of Springdale, Ark.

Case IH: Your best choice in general-purpose tractors.

Five basic power sizes in 21 different styles make Case IH 85 Series tractors the value leaders in their class. There are literally no boundaries in the types of jobs they handle — whether in field, feedlot, orchard or vineyard.

With four basic styles—row-crop, utility, low-profile and Mechanical Front Drive (MFD), you can tailor an 85 Series tractor to your specific farming and cropping practices.

These Case IH tractors are equipped with nearly every standard feature you could want. You enjoy smooth, sure electro-hydraulic power shifting with a dash-mounted toggle switch (standard on 885, optional on others). You can shuttle shift to clean up feedlots, scrape and level loading areas or move bulk feed. You move quickly, almost effortlessly through 16 speeds forward, and eight in reverse.

There's a lot to see in the Case IH 85 Series tractors. See them now at your nearby Case IH dealer.

Dewey Charolais Ranch exhibited the first place get-of-sire on BR-MF Krugerrant T752 progeny; and Shallow Creek Charolais and Sharla Adams had the first place breeder's herd.

Sheep, Lamb Inventory

Sheep and lamb inventory in the United States totaled 10.8 million head on January 1, 1989, according to statistics released by the Agricultural Statistics Board. Figures were nearly the same as a year earlier. The value of sheep and lambs on hand totaled $890 million, down 8 percent from January 1988. The average value per head was $82.40, also down 8 percent from a year earlier. Stock sheep inventory increased to 9.19 million head, up 1 percent from 9.14 million last year. Ewes one year and older, at 7.17 million head, were nearly the same as a year earlier. Ewe lamb inventory totaled 1.34 million head, up 4 percent. Sheep and lambs on feed for the slaughter market in the 25 major feeding states totaled 1.61 million head, down 2 percent from January, 1988.

Breeding ewes one year and older were up 4 percent from the previous year. The 1988 lamb rate was 99 per 100 ewes one year old or older on hand at the beginning of the lambing year compared with 104 in 1987. Goat numbers in Texas totaled 1.75 million, up 6 percent from a year earlier. Total value of $94.7 million was 4 percent below a year earlier. Angora goat inventory on January 1, 1989 in the five major producing states totaled 1.82 million head; value totaled $1.2 million.

FEATURING

- 1.7 hp Ample power for wash machines
- Float carburetor for easier starting
- Weighs only 16 lbs. - Runs washer quietly with minimum vibration. Almost comparable with electric. Saves casters and machine wear.
- Electronic ignition for sure starting when wet.
- Automatic compression release makes it the easiest pulling engine on the market.
- Low oil shutdown stops engine when oil is low.
- Long life cylinder and replaceable crankshaft bearings make it a long lasting rebuildable engine.

Bison Seminar Scheduled

TUNKHANNOCK (Wyoming) — Thanks to our foresighted ancestors, modern day buffalo raisers, the American Bison Association and the National Buffalo Association, the bison (buffalo) is once again flourishing. They can be seen in nearly every state in the union, several foreign countries including Canada where large public and private herds abound once again. Bison (buffalo) meat is enjoyed by many consumers.

In May of 1988, the ABA sponsored the first Northeast bison management seminar in New Castle that was attended by bison ranchers and interested parties from New York, Ohio and Virginia. The Second Annual Northeast Bison Seminar will be held April 8th, in Tunkhannock, Pa. Invitations are being sent out to people interested in bison, in the Northeastern United States. Anyone interested may contact Margery Kutney, at 717/965-2237 or Doyle Thomas of Penn State Cooperative Extension at 717/278-1158.

The Senate Agriculture Committee unanimously recommended Senate confirmation of Clayton Yeutter as secretary of agriculture on February 7. The full Senate was scheduled to vote on the confirmation late last week. At his hearing, Yeutter outlined priorities and positions for U.S. agriculture. Included were: 1) The outcome of GATT Uruguay Round must be known before we construct farm legislation; 2) U.S. agriculture is far too dependent on taxpayers; all safety nets must be evaluated and there are no sacred cows; 3) Broad-based economic factors affecting price competitiveness will impact farm income more than other factors; 4) USDA is too involved in the marketing side of farm business and should permit the marketplace to function more; 5) Successful completion of GATT talks and opening of foreign markets are high priorities; 6)

Export subsidies provide leverage in seeking farm trade reform; 7) There are ample ways to help producers without violating world trade rules; 8) Rural development, including diversification of the economic base, will occupy a large portion of his time; 9) He sees nothing suggesting Commodity Futures Trading Commission functions should be transferred to the Securities and Exchange Commission; 10) The meat-hormone issue will not be resolved by finding a way to certify meat as hormone free.

Dairy Sheep Symposium Set

The North American Dairy Sheep Symposium, July 25-28 at the University of Minnesota's St. Paul campus, will provide information on dairy sheep milking and the manufacture of products from sheep milk. Specialists from Europe and North America will speak on genetics, nutrition, management, milking techniques and equipment, manufacturing high quality sheep milk products, economics, marketing, health management and review dairy sheep enterprises abroad.

Pesticide Certification Exams Set For Luzerne County

WILKES-BARRE — Pesticide Certification Examinations will be given at the Penn State Cooperative Extension Luzerne County Office, Courthouse Annex, 5 Water Street, Wilkes-Barre, PA, Tuesday, March 21, between 8:00 and 10:00 am.

The exam is open to anyone wishing to become certified as private, commercial, or public applicators.

Private applicators are those who are farming and applying pesticides to their crops. Commercial applicators are those who are applying pesticides to property of other people. Public applicators are those who are applying pesticides for research purposes.

The exam is a pass-fail, open book exam. Private exams are free. Others have a charge so come with a check.

For more information call the Penn State Cooperative Extension Luzerne County Office at 825-1701 Hazleton area call 459-0736, Ext. 701. Or the Department of Agriculture at 826-2040 or 836-2181.

Brillion pioneered the Pulvi-Mulcher and has introduced numerous features over the years that have made this machine one of the most popular secondary tillage tools. Now, with the introduction of the ML and MR Series, Brillion offers a longer, high-clearance frame for better flow of trash through the machine. Another new feature is the non-rotating tooth bar that holds the teeth in a fixed pre-set position that keeps them at the proper angle, regardless of the working depth of 2" to 6". Other features and options are shown on the reverse side.

* Contact Brillion Iron Works for details

The ML Series of Pulvi-Mulchers features the (a) 20", six-spoke ductile iron notched roller wheel, made of material which is two-and-a-half times stronger than gray cast iron roller wheels. The roller wheels are manufactured in Brillion's own modern ductile iron foundry that utilizes a computer-controlled Disamatic molding machine. The frame is also designed to accommodate (b) the 16 1/2" notched roller wheel or (c) the 16 1/2" Crowfoot roller wheel for the MR Series. The machine may be ordered with either "C" shaped ribbon teeth or "S" spring tines.

BETTER SEEDBEDS AND BIGGER YIELDS

With some types of tillage the soil is loosely packed with many lumps that allow moisture to evaporate quickly through air pockets. Lost moisture reduces speed of germination and impedes the spread of small feeder roots in their search for nourishment. The Brillion Pulvi-Mulcher crushes both surface and buried lumps and converts fall and spring plowing into a clod-free seedbed. The firm, mulched soil locks in moisture, especially at the root level. Soil nutrients become readily available to the young feeder roots, since they can reach out in all directions without struggling against clods. Nutrients then travel through the root system, developing stronger plants, which in turn result in bigger yields.

This 62-cubic-foot ground-driven manure spreader is offered in tractor or horse-drawn models.

Millcreek Manufactures Compact Spreader

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster) — A 62-cubic-foot ground-drive spreader in tractor or horsedrawn version has been introduced by Millcreek Manufacturing, New Holland, Pa. The new Model 75 spreader features a ground-drive system that was originally designed for spreaders with 25 percent more capacity. The company says the oversize system will allow longer life with fewer problems.

The Model 75 can be ordered in either tractor or horsedrawn version. An 18 horsepower tractor will pull the unit. Two horses are needed for the horsedrawn unit in most normal field conditions. The unit will fit through a five-foot door and is ideal for horse and hobby farms to make stall clean out easier.

For More Information Contact: John Bentley, 717-355-2446, 110 South Railroad Avenue, New Holland, PA 17557.

Farm Credit Promotes Renner

YORK — Chris E. Renner has been promoted to the position of senior loan officer for York Farm Credit, ACA, according to Duane G. Bosler, vice president. In this position, Renner will continue to serve farmer members of York Farm Credit, ACA, in Cumberland County.

Renner, a native of Adams County, attended Penn State University and graduated with a Bachelor of Science degree in agricultural business management. Prior to joining Farm Credit he owned and operated his own business in Littlestown, Pa.

York Farm Credit, ACA, is affiliated with the Farm Credit Bank of Baltimore, part of the nationwide Farm Credit System, the nation's leading agricultural lending institution. The Bank provides funds and service to 16 other agricultural credit associations (ACA) in Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware, Virginia, West Virginia, and the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico.

Hog Slat Adds Gestation Stall To Line

NEWTON GROVE, NC — Hog Slat Inc. recently announced the addition of a new and improved gestation stall to their product line. The new model provides the double benefit of healthier sows, plus reduced equipment costs. The clean environment enables sows to thrive, reducing the number of cull sows dramatically; while solid-steel construction ensures exceptional equipment lifespan.

The North Carolina design is made of painted solid steel, including legs. The following features are standard on all equipment: feed tube drop integrated into stall, solid horizontal bars at rear, solid vertical rods on front and back gates, solid vertical sow protector bars, easy-open front gate with gate rod system to prevent animal from opening gate.

Stalls are available in 20-inch and 24-inch on-center widths, 42-inch high, seven feet long. The same design also is available as a solid stall without feed tube or with galvanized tubular construction.

The solid stand drills on this no-till drill have been designed to keep the ground-working components in line with the large end wheels. The implement also features dial-a-depth adjustment system, which provides a choice of coulters and double-disk openers.

Great Plains Presents 7-Foot No-Till Drill

ASSARIA, KS. — Great Plains brings more than a million acres of no-till experience to their new 7-foot No-Till Drills. These are drills specifically designed for no-till applications from the ground up.

These solid stand drills have been carefully designed to keep the ground-working components in line with the large 9.00x24 end wheels. The end wheel/opener alignment means that the openers neither gouge the soil nor leave the ground; they simply follow the terrain right with the end wheels. Following field curves is easier because the openers aren't side-loaded as they are on units with rear-mounted transport wheels.

The Great Plains no-till drills feature the industry leading dial-a-depth adjustment system. This penetration is superior because they provide a choice of coulters and also double-disk openers, held in the soil by hefty down pressure springs.

The consistent, dependable end wheel drive gives the best in reliability for no-till conditions. Since they're built for no-till conditions, these no-till drills are great at clearing residue: streamlined components slip trash, while the proper coulters to opener distance allows residue to pass through.

Their versatility, their residue clearance, and their compact design make these drills a natural choice for Soil Conservation Districts and other conservation organizations. Their narrow widths make them perfect for narrow roads and gates while their simple, rugged construction is ideal for renting or custom drilling.

For more information contact Great Plains Manufacturing Inc., PO Box 218, Assaria, KS 67416.

JCB Introduces Front-End Loader

WHITE MARSH, MD — A versatile, powerful, new multi-purpose farm machine for year-round use, the Loadall 505-19 telescopic boom materials handler was introduced by JCB Inc.

JCB has beefed up its new Loadall for rugged-terrain farm use with a more powerful 102-horsepower diesel engine, 5,500-pounds lift capacity, and a hydraulically activated boom that extends 19 feet high.

The Loadall 505-19 is designed to be of particular benefit to livestock and dairy managers, baling operations, build materials or grain handlers, and crop farmers, where produce is bulk-loaded, boxed, or palletized.

With three steering modes, the Loadall works in tight spots. In four-wheel steering, the rear wheel turns opposite the front wheels to provide a tighter turning radius. A switch to the crab steering mode puts all four wheels in the same direction to move sideways or to hold the bucket at an angle to work as closely as possible to a fence or wall. The Loadall have 15.5x25 traction tires and full front fenders.

The loader has a 1.25 cubic yard general-purpose bucket and can pack a breakout force of 10,900 pounds. The Q-fit carriage provides for quick changes to any of 30 different attachments including pallet forks, 48-inch block tines, 2½ cubic yard light-material bucket, bale clamp, and manure forks.

The Loadall has a one-year warranty on the entire machine, a two-year unlimited hour warranty on the powertrain, and a three-year unlimited hour warranty on all welded fabrications.

More information is available at JCB dealers, or contact JCB directly at 800/252-4JCB, extension M (for agricultural/crops information) or N (for agricultural/livestock information).

30 YEARS AGO THIS WEEK

-The Lancaster County Soil Conservation District enrolled nine more farms, totaling 832 acres in approved conservation programs during the March directors' meeting this week.

Two of the new district members are from the Lititz Run watershed area, an acute problem area for alternate flooding and lower water tables.

Farmers signing agreements with the district this month are: Clarence R. Nissley, Lititz RD2, 158 acres; Abram Longenecker, Lititz RD2, 94 acres; Robert E. and Walter M. Arnsdorf, Peach Bottom RD1, 81 acres; Jacob R. Glick, Lancaster RD4, 17 acres.

Stephen K. Yoder, Q Quarryville RD3, 97 acres; Norman N. Eberly, New Holland RD1; Harvey M. Hostetter, Lancaster RD2, 68 acres; Lester G. Greiner, Manheim RD4, 65 acres; Homer G. Hess, Marietta RD1, 187 acres.

-bank ad....Current Rate On Insured Savings...3%...Dividends Paid or Compounded Semi-

-Year's subscription to LANCASTER FARMING...$2.00.

-J. Roy Greider, Mt. Joy RD1, will head a delegation of four Lancaster County Farmers' Assn. members included in 175 Penna. farmers trekking to Washington, D.C., Monday. The trip is part of a lobbying effort on the part of the state organization to present its policies to the state congressional delegation.

Also making the trip are Harold G. Rohrer, Lancaster RD1; J. Robert Hess and Ira D. Welk, both of Strasburg RD1.

Donald Ace, Penn State extension dairy specialist, estimates that 50-85 percent of the dairy barns and all of the milkhouses will be remodeled or rebuilt within the next few years.

JCB Inc. has designed its new Loadall 505-19 telescopic-boom materials handler to be a versatile addition to any farm where its 5,500-pound capacity and 19-foot vertical reach will make quick work of most jobs.

Dilemma With European Beef Ban

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre) — On January 1, 1989, the European Common Market banned the import and sale of any meat or meat food product produced with hormonal substances. The effect was a ban on all meat produced in the United States.

"There is no question about it," said Dr. Lowell L. Wilson, Penn State professor of animal science. "That decision was based on politics rather than scientific facts. As a nation we have to be skeptical and question regulations based on emotion rather than rational thinking."

Wilson added that there is a tremendous amount of scientific evidence to show that these products used in accordance with manufacturers' guidelines are safe. "The fact is that essentially the entire scientific community in Europe, Canada, and the United States involved in the study of meat wholesomeness has indicated the resulting meat and meat by-products are safe for consumption," he said. "There are no residues found from these growth enhancers."

In fact, the term "hormone ban" is really not correct since many of the growth stimulants under consideration are not really hormones. They may bring about hormone-like activities within the animal's body, but they are not typically hormones.

"If countries presently using these compounds stop using them, then the agricultural industry and the national and international regulatory agencies are essentially admitting that decisions such as this can be based on false fears rather than scientific evidence and facts," commented Wilson. "Legislation on critical issues, such as wholesomeness of our food supply, humane treatment of animals, and so on, should be based on factual information, not upon emotion or negative publicity."

Beef producers in Canada, Australia, and New Zealand also have been fighting the European Economic Community's action on grounds that it is unjustified and unfair.

After looking at what science has contributed to agriculture, space technology, medical science and engineering, it is difficult to imagine another instance where all of the reliable, factual information was set aside and overlooked.

"There are other controversial agricultural and technological advances and issues that could be challenged, emotionalized and lost to the agricultural industries if we submit to allowing trade and political decisions to set policy and overlook scientific evidence," Wilson said.

The EEC's involvement with anabolic agents began in 1980 when the Italian press ran a series of investigative reports on abnormal sexual development and premature aging in children.

These reports later were proved false. Ironically, the European countries' ban on the use of safe and previously legal growth enhancers has created a black market for hormone mixtures that have not been tested for safety. Thus, Wilson noted, the Europeans have created a potential food safety problem instead of solving one. "Our system is based on scientific analysis, not emotion. The EEC's unscientific approach is dangerous because it creates a black market mentality. When hormones are bought and sold in such a situation, no distinction is made between truly safe and truly unsafe hormones," he said.

Economic efficiencies gained by the use of implants far exceed the total value of U.S. beef products shipped to Europe, according to Wilson. Based purely on economics, U.S. cattle producers are not likely to seek elimination of hormone implant use.

The National Cattlemen's Association estimates that 56 percent of beef cattle are implanted with these growth enhancers. Most cattle slaughtered in the U.S. are grain fed, and approximately 80 percent of these cattle receive growth stimulants at some time during their lives.

The growth enhancers increase the rate of weight gain and decrease the amount of feed used per pound of gain, thus improving efficiency and helping make beef more competitive than it otherwise would be. In addition, the hormone products act as "partitioning agents." They cause an animal to produce more lean meat and less trimmable fat, thus helping cattlemen provide a product in line with consumer preferences.

"In theory, the beef from cattle not given hormone implants still could be shipped to Europe if the ban is enforced," said Wilson. "However, our scientific and regulatory agencies have determined there is no significant or verifiable difference in beef from cattle that have been implanted and those that have not," he added. "There are no statistically or biologically significant differences in estrogen content, since all meat contains some estrogen."

The estrogen in beef from implanted steers is only infinitesimally greater in amount than that in non-implanted steers. The amount of estrogen in beef is much less than in many other foods, a point noted by U.S. food safety officials. "The increase is minuscule in comparison with hormones produced naturally," said Wilson.

For U.S. cattle producers, loss of sales in Europe would be approximately $100 million per year. These products would have to be sold elsewhere, in the U.S. or overseas at lower prices. Based on total slaughter of some 35 million head per year, the loss would average about $3 per head.

"The industry supports action taken by the administration and Congress to remove this unfair trade barrier," Wilson said. The industry also supports plans to impose retaliatory duties on products from Europe.

The United States has made every effort to find a solution based on sound scientific analysis. The EEC signed an international code of conduct agreeing not to erect trade barriers on health grounds unless there is a scientific basis. "Despite this, the EEC has refused to allow a panel of scientists to determine whether its action against imported meat is consistent with that commitment," said Wilson.

"Hopefully, some agreement between Europe and the United States can be reached before this escalates into a full-scale trade war."

National Alfalfa Conference To Be Held In Hershey

HERSHEY (Dauphin) — Alfalfa growers in Maryland and the Mid-Atlantic area have a rare opportunity next week to gain useful information about their business. The National Alfalfa Symposium will be held Tuesday, March 14, in the Hershey Convention Center at Hershey, PA. About 300 persons are expected to attend.

The nineteenth annual event is being sponsored this year by the Certified Alfalfa Seed Council of Davis, Calif., with cooperation from Penn State University, Cornell, Delaware State College and the University of Maryland.

This educational meeting is being held in the Northeast for the first time in a dozen years, reports Dr. Lester R. Vough, forage crops specialist for the Cooperative Extension Service at the University of Maryland.

Dr. Vough currently is president of the Grazing Lands Forum, a consortium of independent national organizations interested in the impacts of grazing management and activities that affect grazing lands.

Growers from 40 states attended last year's National Alfalfa Symposium at St. Joseph, Mo. Next year's meeting will be held at Lincoln, Neb.

Theme for this year's symposium is "Managing Alfalfa for Profit." Speakers will address topics ranging from production practices to harvesting, feeding and marketing alfalfa.

One of the afternoon speakers on the latter topic will be Patrick McMillan, a marketing specialist for the Maryland Department of Agriculture. McMillan will team with Lisa Meriney, a graduate research assistant from Penn State, in a presentation on "Meeting the Horse Hay Market Needs."

Registration will begin at 8 a.m. on the day of the symposium in the Hershey Convention Center.

No advance registration is necessary. The $15 registration fee will include lunch, refreshment breaks, a copy of the conference proceedings and a large packet of informational materials.

A trade show will be in progress throughout the day, with a large group of exhibitors expected to display a wide range of products and services affecting alfalfa.

Poultry, Dairy Products Dominate Maryland's Agriculture

WASHINGTON, DC — Livestock, poultry, and their products accounted for $753 million, or 74 percent of Maryland's agricultural sales in 1987, figures from the Commerce Department's Census Bureau show. Poultry and poultry products accounted for 43 percent of total agricultural sales, and dairy products accounted for 19 percent.

Crops, including nursery and greenhouse products, accounted for $253 million or 26 percent of total agricultural sales. Corn, soybeans, and hay were the leading crops by harvested acres with 432,409 acres, 405,170 acres, and 255,676 acres respectively. The 1987 Census of Agriculture shows that Maryland's total agricultural sales amounted to $989 million.

The 14,776 Maryland farms counted in 1987 were 9 percent fewer than in 1982, when the last agriculture census was taken. Some 45 percent had 1987 sales of $10,000 or more, and 18 percent had annual sales of $100,000 or more.

Production expenditures for the Value of Livestock and Poultry Sold

State Total = $736,006,000 state's agricultural operations came to $851 million. Agricultural operators paid 30 percent less for commercial fertilizers and 19 percent more for hired farm labor than they did in 1982. They spent 9 percent more for livestock and poultry feed.

Multiple Pest Resistance In Alfalfa How Much Is Enough?

In an earlier column, I discussed multiple pest resistance in general. And at that time I also took a brief look at the five most serious diseases attacking alfalfa in our region. These are: Bacterial Wilt, Verticillium Wilt, Anthracnose, Phytophthora Root Rot and Fusarium Wilt. There are, of course, several other disease and insect pests that can damage this valuable crop.

In this column I'd like to look at multiple pest resistance in somewhat greater depth and try to help you rate it in terms of choosing a variety or varieties for your farm.

But first let's consider for a moment what you as a producer should expect from your alfalfa crop. I've asked a number of farmers like yourself and they generally agree on the following: high yield, quality forage, persistent stands, and yes, they'd like to know that they can depend on consistent performance every time they establish a new stand.

High yields, of course, start with varieties that have high yield potential. But soil and moisture conditions, your fertility and cutting management programs, and pest control, along with other management factors, all enter into the yield picture very strongly.

Most growers agree that the most important single factor affecting quality is stage of maturity at the time of harvest. You control that. But we also now know that it's possible to breed for high quality in alfalfa without losing yield potential.

Persistence also starts with improved varieties that have the potential to persist. And here's where multiple pest resistance in alfalfa has its biggest impact. If you start with healthy plants that have an adequate level of resistance to the diseases common to your area - and then keep those plants healthy with a good fertility and management program - your stands should persist for the four or more years desired by most growers.

In my earlier column, I stated that an alfalfa variety with a moderate to high level of multiple pest resistance for a given area is generally superior in yield and resistance to a variety with high resistance to one disease or pest but without resistance to others.

But what is an adequate level of multiple pest resistance? The National Alfalfa Variety Review Board, made up of respected alfalfa breeders from both the public and private sector, established guidelines for the industry to use when reporting the resistance of a variety to a given disease. Briefly, varieties in which less than 5% of the plants are resistant to a particular disease or insect are rated susceptible (S). Those with 6-14% resistant plants have low resistance (LR), while populations with 15-30% of the plants resistant are considered moderately resistant (MR). Varieties with 31-50% resistant plants are called resistant (R) while those with more than 50% resistant plants can be called highly resistant (HR).

Alfalfa breeders are, of course, striving to develop high levels of resistance to all the major pests. However, numerous studies have shown that varieties rated MR or better to the problem diseases in your area usually provide adequate protection under most field conditions. The important thing to remember is that the variety should be rated MR or higher to each of the important diseases. While very high levels of resistance are impressive, this level of resistance is more than is needed for most situations.

Montour County Accepting Orders For Seedlings

DANVILLE (Montour) — The Montour County Conservation District is offering you the opportunity to invest in the future. Twelfth Annual Tree Sale orders now are being accepted for spring planting.

Included in this year's sale are evergreen and deciduous seedlings, fruit trees, ground covers, barberry bushes and spice bushes.

The most important purpose of having a tree sale is to promote conservation by the establishment of adequate cover on erodible areas. Land left empty without ground cover or trees has a greater tendency to erode than land with cover plantings.

Cover plantings provide benefits other than soil and water conservation. Areas with trees and shrubs provide wildlife food and shelter in places where animal habitat is diminishing.

The Montour Conservation District will use monies earned through this sale to purchase educational materials and programs throughout the year.

To receive an order form call the Montour County District office at 271-3059 or stop in at the District office on Woodbine Lane in Danville.

Future Of Chester County Agriculture To Be Discussed

W. CHESTER — The Chester County Cooperative Extension will sponsor "The Future of Chester County Agriculture" on March 20, 7:30-9:30 p.m., at the Sadsburyville Fire Hall, just south of Business Route 30 on First Avenue in Sadsburyville, Pa. This meeting will give an overview of the future of farming in the county in view of the numerous pressures and problems trying to push the Chester County farmers from their land.

Speakers will include:

- George Fasic, director, Chester County Planning Commission, on the County's Comprehensive Plan and how it will impact the agricultural community, changes in the road system, zoning regulations and population distribution.

- Gary Schroeder, Chester County mushroom farmer, pre-sending the farmer's point-of-view on high land costs, farmland preservation, zoning, air and water pollution, manure/waste disposal, water quality, labor shortages and unionization, low profitability margins, OSHA and DER, etc.

- Bill James, banker, on the future of specific farm enterprises in Chester County such as dairy, swine, mushroom, beef, vegetable, fruit, agronomic crops and aquaculture.

- Fred Seipt, Montgomery County dairyman, on how he has dealt with living next to suburbia, manure disposal, traffic problems, sideline businesses and direct milk marketing.

- Sam Steel, Cooperative Extension agent/horticulture & mushrooms, on what it will take to be successful in the 1990s and beyond; what size farm and what farming enterprises and side businesses have the most potential in the county; what is the future of direct marketing?

Although this meeting is designed for farmers, the general public concerned about farmland preservation and the future of commercial farming in Chester County is encouraged to attend. For further information, contact Alan Strock, Extension Agent/Farm Management, at the Chester County Cooperative Extension, 215-696-3500, Mondays, Wednesdays & Fridays, 8:30 a.m.-4:30 p.m.

BIG YIELDER MODEL 2500 RAISED BED PLASTIC MULCH LAYER

Not all mulch layers look and work the same, it's how the mulch is layed that really counts.

Featuring

- Independent, spring loaded cover arms with 6 way disk hillers. No wrench needed for adjustment. Convenient cranks for more or less coverage.
- Independent presswheels that "float" with angle adjustment, no wrench needed.
- Fast reloading! Full open back of machine (no bars to step over). Machine will carry two 48" x 4000' rolls of plastic mulch.
- Plastic mulch goes under "floating" roller (in back of machine) thus giving a tightly stretched mulch and pressed bed.
- Beds are 4" to 6" high (depending on adjustment). Machine has adjustable row markers.
- Insecticide applicator (optional) by "GANDY", is driven off roll of film plastic. Thus, application rates are uniform regardless of speed mulch layer is driven.
- Drip irrigation attachment (optional) is adjustable side to side and up and down, will handle large or small drip line spools.

ECONOMICAL MODEL 560 FLAT BED PLASTIC MULCH LAYER

When it comes to mulch laying, take a close up look at the Model 560. Mulch laying is prior to planting your baby plants, and is more than just rolling out your plastic mulch. Uniform beds and tightly layed plastic mulch is a must for a higher bottom line.

Featuring

- Very uniform beds, the Model 560 eliminates pot holes in seed bed. Heavy 1/4" steel pan will press bed. Has furrow openers on bottom.
- Independent spring loaded cover arms with convenient cranks for more or less coverage. For maximum control of coverage, this machine has scrapers instead of disk covers.
- Fast reloading! Full open back of machine (no bars to step over).
- Plastic mulch goes under "floating" roller for maximum tightness. Independent press wheels also "float" with angle adjustment, no wrench needed.
- With minor adjustment, machine will lay 4' or 5' plastic. (Adaptor optional.) Carries two 4000' rolls of plastic mulch.
- Insecticide applicator (optional) by "GANDY" is driven off roll of film plastic. Thus, application rates are uniform regardless of speed mulch layer is driven.

WATER WHEEL PLANT SETTER

Featuring

Planter will plant through plastic mulch with constant depth control for the plants. Plants 1 or 2 rows on one bed. Simple operation, will water as you plant, has water flow control. Also, water off/on controlled by planters or tractor operator. Machine has four tray carrying racks, two are "self feeding" right to the planter seats.

Comes with category 2, 3-point hook up. Economically priced.

Full line of drip irrigation, plastic mulches, and supplies in stock.

Todd Appointed Assistant Dean For Research

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre) — Dr. Robert L. Todd has been appointed professor of agronomy, assistant dean for research and assistant director of the Agricultural Experiment Station for Penn State's College of Agriculture, effective March 1.

As assistant dean, he will work with the associate dean for research and the faculty in all college academic units to help establish research priorities and initiate research proposals that further college research. The College Office for Research supports approximately 250 College of Agriculture faculty who are involved in disciplinary and interdisciplinary research at the University Park campus and three field research laboratories.

"We are fortunate to have someone of Dr. Todd's stature to help further our research program," says dean of the College of Agriculture Lamartine F. Hood. "He comes at a time when we are embarking on a series of much needed research initiatives in a number of critical areas, such as water quality management, pesticide safety and rural economic development. We are asking our agricultural community and the state legislature to support these research programs, and Dr. Todd will be part of the team that puts those initiatives into action."

As former professor and head of the Department of Microbiology for the College of Agriculture and Biological Sciences at South Dakota State University, Todd joins the Penn State faculty with a strong background in research. He has served as special assistant to the president of South Dakota State, coordinating a university-wide program to prepare grants that aid industrial development in the state. Projects from this assignment include developing oats for human consumption, preparing water additives for livestock and plant production and designing an electronic marking system that tracks animals from production through slaughter and marketing.

He also served as coordinator of sponsored research grants and contracts for the College of Agriculture and Biological Sciences. He was responsible for identifying funding opportunities and helping faculty prepare grants.

Head of the department since 1982, Todd initiated a number of changes including expanding instruction and research in biotechnology, developing an industrial economic program to support the state's agricultural industry, initiating joint research projects with other departments in plant, animal and veterinary sciences and creating a departmental Ph.D. program to be operational in 1990.

At South Dakota State, Todd served on a number of university committees such as the Academic Senate and was chair in 1987-1988. He was selected as alumnus of the year in 1987 by the faculty, students and alumni of his department. He has lectured and published numerous articles on nutrient cycling and soil microbiology.

Before going to South Dakota State, Todd was in the Department of Agronomy at the University of Georgia. His research was focused on nutrient cycling in agricultural systems. He was honored as a Research Scientist of the Year in 1979, 1980 and 1981 by the College of Agriculture.

Pennsylvania To Auction Off Used State Vehicles

HARRISBURG — Secretary of General Services David L. Jannetta today announced that an auction of 220 used state vehicles will be held Thursday, March 16 at 10 a.m. in the Commonwealth Garage at 2221 Forster Street, Harrisburg.

The Department of General Services will offer passenger cars, trucks and other vehicles on a "where is, as is" basis. The auction is open to the general public, dealers and state employees, except General Services employees or their agents.

Prospective bidders may inspect the vehicles outside the Commonwealth Garage or at various locations around the state now through March 13. Bidders must register and receive a number on the day of the sale to bid on vehicles.

Thirty-six of the vehicles are housed at various locations outside Harrisburg, such as Mifflintown, Mercer and Clarks Summit.

Complete rules and instructions and a listing of the vehicles to be sold are available from the Department of General Services Bureau of Vehicle Management, 2221 Forster Street, P.O. Box 1365, Harrisburg, PA 17105. For more information, please call 717 783-3132.

Those attending the vehicle auction also are invited to stop in at the State Surplus Property Warehouse located on the lower level of the 22nd & Forster Street Building. The State Surplus Property Program offers excellent bargains on a wide variety of hundreds of items for sale to the general public such as typewriters, file cabinets, desks and chairs. The warehouse is open Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. - 4 p.m. For more information on the State Surplus Property Program, call (717) 787-9062.

Penn State Faculty Participates In Rural Development Symposium

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre) — The United States differs from many European countries in its approach to planning and developing its rural areas. For the most part, U.S. rural policy has centered agriculture. However, for many European nations, rural policy has encompassed a broader array of social and economic concerns.

This was the major conclusion reached by participants at the "Symposium on Comparative National Perceptions and Political Significance of Rural Areas" held at the Aspen Foundation's Wye Plantation on the Chesapeake Bay. The international assembly was sponsored by the Ford Foundation, the Aspen Institute, the Economic Research Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture and Penn State University.

Three Penn State faculty members participated in the program which included experts from France, West Germany, Japan, Denmark, Great Britain and the United States. Theodore R. Alter, associate professor of agricultural economics, served as organizer and co-chairperson for the event. Stephen Smith, associate professor of agricultural economics, and Drew Hyman, professor of public policy and community systems, were invited participants.

"The purpose of the conference was to focus on each nation's perspectives on rural development and how these perspectives are reflected in political processes and public policies," stated Alter. "Implications for U.S. rural development and public policy were significant topics in the discussions, giving the U.S. participants an opportunity to view the current status of their rural areas in the light of other countries' developments."

"European nations have tended to deal with rural development in a broader, more holistic context than has been the case in the United States. The U.S. rural policy has for the most part been agricultural policy," Hyman observed.

"In Europe, rural policy encompasses not only agriculture, forestry, mining and fisheries but also other uses of rural areas including landscaping, environmental protection, recreation, housing, health and the entire rural infrastructure. Planning for these latter concerns is scattered throughout U.S. policy and is generally an offshoot of urban policy."

"Rural America and the natural resources from which we have traditionally derived our livelihoods are threatened by profound changes in the structure of agriculture, demography and development," said Alter. "In many areas of this country the decline in the number of farmers has resulted in an emerging economic structure with a reliance on more than the agricultural sector."

According to Smith, this pattern has significant consequences for economic development. "In this country we've focused our efforts on the industrialization of rural areas. At the same time we know that non-manufacturing employment is the wave of the future," he said. "We need to think about what we need for high-quality rural communities and the investments necessary to make it happen."

On a note closer to home Alter said, "We were pleased to confirm that we at Penn State are asking the right questions and developing substantive programs in rural development." Smith agreed, stating, "We have a solid core of faculty members who are focusing on rural development." Hyman added, "A major strength is our interdisciplinary faculty with its emphasis on applied and policy research. The symposium highlighted the fact that rural development requires a synthesis of perspectives."

Alter and Richard Long, assistant director of the Agriculture and Rural Economy Division, Economic Research Service, U.S. Department of Agriculture, are preparing to publish the proceedings of the symposium.

Chester County Plans Crops Day

W. CHESTER — The Chester County Cooperative Extension will hold Chester County Crops Day on Thursday, March 16, from 9:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m. at the East Brandywine Fire Hall in Guthrieville. The Crops Day program includes an opportunity for pesticide license update credits.

Speakers for the Crops Day meeting include John Yocum and Lynn Hoffman of Penn State's Agronomy Department and Alan Strock and Dave Swartz, Chester County Cooperative Extension Agents. Commercial exhibitors will display the latest technology available to agronomic crop farmers in the area.

There is a registration fee of $5 which includes lunch. For registration information, contact the Chester County Cooperative Extension at 215-696-3500.

Researchers Study Band Vs. In-Furrow Insecticide Application

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. — When planning for soil insecticide applications this spring, should you set up your planter for in-furrow or band application? Does either method provide better rootworm control or help increase yields?

Several researchers at universities in the Corn Belt have tackled these questions and their conclusions suggest that the performance of both application methods is similar, with banding — specifically "T-banding" — getting the slight numerical edge on the root rating scale.

Researchers also pointed out that banding offers greater product flexibility. All soil insecticides can be applied in a band. But most cannot be applied in-furrow.

Fewer Choices

According to Dr. Tom Turpin, Purdue University research and extension entomologist, in-furrow offers less flexibility in a farmer's choice of insecticide because most products aren't labeled for it.

"This limits your choice to two or three insecticides," he says.

Another problem farmers can encounter with in-furrow application is volatilization.

"When you put the soil insecticide down inside the furrow, in order to protect the roots, the material must move up in the soil as well as down," Turpin explains.

"With most products, the insecticide tends to move downward with the movement of water," he says. "This situation allows rootworms to come in over the top of the insecticide and creates a situation where damage can occur."

Economic Considerations

Dr. Jon Tollefson, director for the Iowa State University corn insect research project, says in-furrow application also may have economic limitations.

"If a grower feels that he has to put his insecticide on in-furrow, he may not be able to use the most economical material because it may not be labeled for in-furrow use," says Tollefson. "Instead of focusing on the method of application, a farmer should look at how a material performs in his area. Then he should look at the cost and how it fits into his farming program, since cost is such an important factor now."

Performance About Equal

Looking strictly at performance, most universities have found more differences among corn rootworm insecticides than they have between band in-furrow application.

In a two-year study at Iowa State University, scientists evaluated three tillage systems, several methods of incorporation.

placement of banding units in front of or behind presswheels, and band versus in-furrow application. About 6 percent residue was left under conventional tillage, about 30 percent with a single discing, and about 60 to 65 percent with no-till.

According to Tollefson, they found no significant tillage-insecticide interactions, nor any significant differences in band versus in-furrow placement, although band did show a slight edge over in-furrow.

Best performance for bands was in conventional tillage, as the scientist expected. Performance diminished slightly with 30 percent residue cover, and slightly more with no-till. But changes were so small that it essentially brought banding down to the same level of performance as the in-furrow treatment.

"If you look at the big picture of all of our studies over 15 years, our band treatments beat in-furrow treatments about 60 percent of the time, and the difference is about one-half point on a root rating scale of one to six," notes Tollefson.

He adds that in the 1988 studies, the difference was only one-

University trials show that T-banding is as effective or more effective than in-furrow applications of insecticide. T-banding also gives the grower more insecticide options from which to choose.

twentieth of a point. "Neither one-half nor one-twentieth of a point equals a difference that will show up in a yield, which is what interests a farmer."

"But, if we had to pick one method of application, our overall choice would be the T-band because it's beat the in-furrow 60 percent of the time," Tollefson says. "Even though it was only by a minimal margin, it still came out on top."

Dr. John Wedberg, University of Wisconsin extension entomologist, says that studies done in his state show banding and in-furrow applications to be almost identical.

"In our research trials using a John Deere 7000 planter, we have not been able to find an advantage to either method of performance," he says.

He adds that because many of the growers in the Midwest use the

made with fiberglass, the material of the future — and proven in the past —

The Fiberdome chute is designed and engineered to be installed on most types of silos. Its structure allows it to withstand the toughest beating the weather elements or silo unloading systems can possibly dish out.

The chute is constructed in full 7 1/2' sections to minimize the number of joints. Connecting joints have a 2 1/2" tongue and groove design to keep feed in and water out. The large ribbed construction adds stability and strength.

Fiberglass is durable, corrosion-proof, attractive and translucent, allowing sunlight to pass through. Sunlight quickly dries interior moisture in the chute. The hard gleaming gelcote surface will remain for many years.

TESTIMONIAL OF AN OWNER

I've had Fiberdome chute for 20 years and it looks as nice as the day it was put up. Silage doesn't freeze on, plenty of light inside and there is no rust! When I put up a new silo it is going to have Fiberdome chute.

Band Vs. In-Furrow

John Deere equipment, most of the corn acres receive a T-banded soil insecticide application.

In Ohio, researchers haven't done much specific research comparing banding versus in-furrow application, says Dr. Harold Willson, Ohio State University entomologist. But they have observed both systems and studied research data.

"If it's placed in front of the press or closing wheels in the band, I frankly doubt if there is any real difference between banding and in-furrow from a performance standpoint, regardless of the tillage system," declares Willson.

"We do recommend that farmers have the band up in front of the press or closing wheels."

Ken Ostlie, entomologist at the University of Minnesota, agrees.

"In our studies, regardless of the tillage system used, we essentially have found no real differences in the effectiveness among placement methods, whether it's in-furrow, band in front of the press wheel, or behind. All seem to give us roughly the same level of performance, though there are slight numerical differences," he says.

Funeral HomesPromoting Reforestation

BETHLEHEM, NH — Several hundred funeral homes, through their membership in the Lofty Oaks Association, have made a commitment to improve the environment. They can provide a living memorial by having a tree planted in the name of the deceased on public lands in their home state.

After the funeral service, close family members or friends are informed that the funeral home has arranged for a memorial tree to be planted. When the foresters have planted the tree in the spring or fall, the designated parties are sent an official certificate of planting, suitable for framing or retaining as a family keepsake. According to Craig Klocker, marketing director of Lofty Oaks, "the program has been very well received by relatives and friends of the deceased and the communities as a whole. The number of affiliated funeral homes has increased tenfold over the past few years."

Last summer's heat waves, drought, and reported of global warming were attributed to the greenhouse effect. Excessive carbon dioxide is the main cause of this condition. Green plants and trees absorb this gas and dispense oxygen to the atmosphere. The trees also contribute to the beauty of the landscape. To date, more than 30,000 memorial trees have been planted in the various states. Recently the American Forestry Association announced an effort termed Global Releaf to encourage the public to plant more trees.

Extension Housing Agent Plans Multi-County Programs

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre) — Ronald K. Dodds, a multi-county associate extension agent for Penn State Cooperative Extension stationed in Monroe County, has a full agenda of community development and agricultural education programs for the area.

In agriculture, he is working with farmers on crop management, livestock management and, more specifically, risk management. "I plan to help clients learn how to use government programs effectively, develop sound farm management plans and I have a special interest in working with farmers and others on pesticide safety," he says.

Most of Dodd's work in community development concerns growth-related issues. He is now meeting with landowners to establish agricultural preservation areas under Act 43 and plans to work with the Monroe Council of Governments and local townships on the program. He also is developing workshops for local government officials on community planning issues in general, with an emphasis on planning for change.

"The Monroe County 4-H Government Intern program is an excellent program to get students as well as their parents involved in community issues planning," says

Ronald K. Dodds

Dodds. "So many of our residents are new to the area and don't understand their role in making local government work. This is a program I hope to expand next year," he says.

The 4-H intern program is operated through local school districts. High school students are assigned to work with a local government agency on a specific issue and they receive academic credit and a grade for their work. At the moment, the Pleasant Valley High School in Brodheadsville is the only school in the county participating in the program.

The quality of individual water supplies has been a regional concern for some time. Dodds is planning a workshop on how home owners can improve the quality of private water supplies, including testing options and care and maintenance information. He also is working with the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Resources and the Environmental Protection Agency on a national pesticides survey concerning pesticides and groundwater supplies.

In the area of renewable resource management, he is helping to develop environmentally sound forestry programs as a member of the Pocono-Northeast Resource Conservation and Development Council's forestry committee. He also plans to develop workshops and printed material on soil nutrient management as part of an effort to protect the Delaware Bay.

In addition, he plans to develop indoor air quality workshops focused on radon education and on testing programs and options home owners may have to reduce radon if necessary. "We will probably wait until next fall to offer this program," he says.

Dodds received a bachelor's degree in agronomy from Penn State in 1982. He has worked in agricultural business management and sales with Agway in the central region of Pennsylvania and was an assistant manager in three locations in Cecil and Kent counties on the Eastern Shore of Maryland with Southern States Cooperative. He is a member of a number of professional associations such as the Soil Science Society of America, the Crop Science Society of America and the American Society of Agronomy.

A native of Mercer County, Dodds graduated from Commodore Perry High School in Hadley and the Environmental Technology program at the Mercer County Vocational School.

For more information about agricultural and community development programs in Monroe County, contact Dodds at (717) 992-7344.

Brochure On Steel Drum Alternative

TACOMA, WA — Big Bin, the 300-gallon alternative to the steel drum, is featured in a totally new brochure from the American Plywood Association (APA).

Big Bin is constructed of APA trademarked structural wood panels. It holds as much as five and a half steel drums, yet fits in the space of four drums and knocks down flat for even more efficient return when empty. It can be reused over and over again to ship a range of industrial and agricultural products, wet or dry, liquid or solid.

The 16-page "APA Industrial Use Guide: Big Bin" shows the uses of Big Bin in a series of mini case histories and gives complete fabrication instructions, including assembly diagrams and lists of required hardware.

To obtain a free single copy of the brochure, write to the American Plywood Association, Department L230A, PO Box 11700, Tacoma, WA 98411.

The Woods mow'n machine™

It runs circles around trees, shrubs, fence rails and the competition.

Maximum maneuverability is the key to the mow'n machine's growing popularity. Because engine power is supplied to each wheel independently, a true 360° zero radius turn can be made smoothly...without any damage to your lawn.

And the mow'n machine makes all the right moves...even in those hard-to-reach places. That keeps you from having to double-back for time-consuming follow-up trimming.

Available with either a gasoline or diesel powered engine, the mow'n machine also features an out-front mower deck, finger tip controls for speed, direction and breaking and a comfortable, vinyl-padded, driver's seat.

Adding versatility to the mow'n machine is easy with these easy-on, easy-off attachments:

U.S. Agriculture Will Hold Its Own In World Market

By Milt Nelson
University of Maryland
Extension ag editor

Prior to World War II, prices of American farm products generally were little affected by developments in other countries. But, for two decades afterward — during the 1950s and 1960s — U.S. farmers faced the rosy challenge of virtually feeding the world.

However, the effects of the Green Revolution began to change things noticeably on the world scene in the 1970s. And by the early 1980s, U.S. farmers were facing stiff competition in the world marketplace from their counterparts in Europe and South America.

Countries like India, with a long history of starvation, suddenly were able to feed themselves. And products like palm oil from the South Pacific became a market burden for U.S. soybean producers.

So what about the future of U.S. agriculture? Does the Green Revolution spell its virtual demise on the world scene in the next century? Should housing developments, industrial parks and recreational areas be allowed to turn this nation into a city-state?

Some relevant answers to these questions are provided in a recent essay by Dennis Avery, senior agricultural analyst for the U.S. Department of State. His article, "Agriculture in the Next 20 Years," is the final chapter in the USDA's 1985 Yearbook of Agriculture.

Avery notes that this country cannot afford to give up its farm exports, which contribute greatly toward helping to reduce the U.S. trade deficit. Turning away from farm exports, he says, would eliminate hundreds of thousands of U.S. farm and farm-related jobs.

U.S. farmers traditionally have looked on their fertile cropland and relatively ideal climate as a major part of their competitive advantage. But the advantage today is shifting toward modern technology and high productivity. In addition, this nation has excellent off-farm systems which enhance farm efficiency greatly.

These systems include the personal incentives provided by a democracy, land-grant colleges in every state with their agricultural research and Extension education programs, and a long-established manufacturing and distribution base.

In addition, the United States can take pride in its marketing complex of air and rail lines, waterways, hard-surface roads and rodent-proof storage facilities, which permit large volumes of agricultural commodities to move rapidly from farms to consumers at low unit costs, which are the envy of most of the rest of the world.

The shift toward modern technology can be regarded partly as a continuation of the Green Revolution that began approximately 25 years ago. This shift is being accelerated by the advent of biotechnology, or genetic engineering.

Land-grant colleges and the U.S. Department of Agriculture led the way in both the research and educational aspects of hybrid corn, which revolutionized this nation's agriculture in the 1930s.

But the biotechnology revolution of the 1990s is shaping up as a three-way partnership among land-grant universities, USDA and agribusiness.

At least one large commercial seed company has made significant progress in developing hybrid corn varieties that are resistant to certain grass-killing herbicides. Two or more agricultural companies have made breakthroughs in developing soybean and cotton strains with tolerance to specific herbicides which kill broadleaf weeds.

And a Maryland biotech firm has received approval from the U.S. Food and Drug Administration to field-test a genetically engineered corn variety which holds great promise for resistance to the European corn borer.

All of this will make management decisions more complex for farmers. But it portends better quality and residue-free food for consumers.

As long as American agriculture remains on the cutting edge of technology and productivity, it should continue to make an important and well-rewarded contribution to this nation and the world.

THE SIMPLE ANSWER TO THE COMPLEX OF CORN PESTS

USE COUNTER.® BECAUSE YOU CAN'T AFFORD A PERFORMANCE GAP IN INSECT CONTROL.

Every season, a complex of insect pests is waiting to attack your corn crop. So you need the best protection you can get with COUNTER® systemic insecticide-nematicide.

NO PERFORMANCE GAP

COUNTER consistently controls more major corn pests than any other product. And you can't afford to risk a performance gap in your insect control. (See chart.)

COUNTER controls a broad spectrum of pests, including corn rootworms, wireworms, white grubs, nematodes and other insects that can attack your crop and reduce yields. And COUNTER gives you guaranteed cutworm protection. See your local Cyanamid AgriCenter™

Jaycees Honor Nation's Top Young Farmers

TUSCALOOSA, AL — The United States Jaycees honored four farmers during the 33rd annual National Outstanding Young Farmer Awards Congress, Saturday, February 25, at the Paul Bryant Center.

The winners were chosen from 40 state honorees after a year-long nomination process. Nominees are judged on their progress in agriculture, the extent of their soil and water conservation practices and their contributions to the well-being of their community, state and nation. These judging criteria apply to the local, state and national competitions.

The 1989 honorees are:

Jerry Doan, 35, of McKenzie, North Dakota. In 1882, Doan's great-grandfather homesteaded 160 acres in McKenzie. Doan is the fourth generation on his farm and today operates 8,500 acres. He has used several cattle breeding systems with artificial insemination, trying to maximize conception rates while minimizing labor and costs.

The Farm Business Management System developed by the North Dakota Vocational Agriculture System assists in his computerized enterprise analysis. He was appointed to the North Dakota Beef Commission and has been a member of the North Dakota Stockmen's Association 20 years.

James Giamarese, 33, of East Brunswick, New Jersey. He raises vegetables from asparagus to zucchini and a variety of small fruit, his own vegetable transplants, and bedding plants. In 1981, Giamarese helped form the Harvest Square Farmers Tailgate Market. In 1982, he built a farm stand and entered three more tailgate markets while continuing to wholesale vegetables to ensure good cash flow. In addition, he made crops available for consumers to pick their own produce.

Giamarese hopes to expand his farm tour schedule and continue educating people about the importance of supporting agriculture nationally. Giamarese's wife is Susan.

Marlan Johnson, 31, of Eagle, Nebraska. At age 11, Johnson rented an 18-acre field from a neighbor landowner, on a 60/40 crop share arrangement. When he was 15, his father died, and Johnson was thrust into an active partnership within his family's livestock and grain operation. He was one of the first farmers in his area to use fungicides for disease control in wheat, and he was selected as Nebraska's candidate for Central Region Star American Farmer.

Johnson and his wife, Mary, are active alumni of Future Farmers of America. They have testified at school board meetings, stressing the importance of agriculture in the classroom.

Gary Riggs, 35, of Garfield, New Mexico. In the late 1970s, Riggs and a friend began farming

90 to 1,000, accommodating green and red chile, corn, wheat, lettuce and alfalfa.

Wayne Residents Meet Legislators

HARRISBURG — Several Wayne County residents, Theodore Kostige, of Lakeville and Robert Muller Sr., of Pleasant Mount, met with representatives in Harrisburg recently as part of the annual Legislative Day activities sponsored by the Pennsylvania Council of Cooperative Extension Associations (PCCEA).

"Legislative Day is a chance for people from throughout the Commonwealth to meet with members of the General Assembly so we can express our support of programs offered by Penn State Cooperative Extension," said Kostige, president of Wayne County Extension Executive Committee, and a delegate from Wayne County.

"This year, we are especially interested in increasing funding for research in seven areas. This research will form the foundation for the extension programs of the future," said Kostige.

More than 225 PCCEA delegates from across Pennsylvania met in Harrisburg for the day-long session. After meeting with representatives and aides at the Capitol, they were joined by approximately 75 members of the General Assembly for dinner.

The seven top priority agricultural research initiatives supported by the PCCEA are: water quality and management, food safety and nutrition, pesticide safety, animal health, forest resources, profitability in Pennsylvania agriculture, and rural economic development.

Penn State Supports Crop Management Associations

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre) — Crop Management Associations in 27 Pennsylvania counties have been promoting sound management practices for 10 years. These associations have helped more than 400 member farmers increase their profits and reduce the harmful environmental effects that can result from poorly managed agricultural operations.

The Penn State College of Agriculture provides a number of services to the Crop Management Associations, such as training for new technicians, manuals and newsletters, educational workshops and computer equipment loans. Penn State also provides statewide coordination of Crop Management Association activities through the Pennsylvania Crop Management Association.

At a recent meeting of the Pennsylvania Crop Management Association, Al Turgeon, head of the Penn State department of agronomy; Lamartine Hood, dean of the College of Agriculture; and Senator Roger Madigan discussed strategies for strengthening and expanding the Crop Management Associations.

"Financial management, record keeping and continued cooperation with Penn State are critical factors for the continued success of Crop Management Associations," said Turgeon. Stating that "membership doesn't cost, it pays," Turgeon suggested that the associations offer competitive salaries to attract and retain qualified technicians. "Revenue for these salaries," he said, "might be generated by improving scouting efficiency and thus the number of acres a scout can service, by increasing acreage fees, and possibly by entering into contracts with state agencies to provide nutrient management and integrated pest management plans for farmer members."

Crop Management Associations also may use decision support systems, or "expert systems," being developed by the college to suggest management alternatives based on data from member farms. Association members will be the first to participate in and utilize these systems.

Research conducted by the college on water quality and management, pesticide safety and profitability in agriculture may help the associations deal with issues such as pesticide contamination of food, water and air. Dean Hood said that present and future research on issues such as these is essential to maintain the strength of the state's agriculture industry.

Crop Management Associations are also supported by the state of Pennsylvania through support for research in critical issues such as drought management. "Such funding," Senator Madigan stressed, "is dependent on input from association members." Madigan urged members to "get involved" in local government issues such as tax dispersal, zoning and sewage and waste water treatment.

To join a Crop Management Association and to find out the name of your local Crop Management Association technician, contact the Penn State Cooperative Extension office in your county.

Investigating New Disease Calls For Detective Work

BY CLAIRE McCABE
University of Delaware

If you've got a culprit to catch, call on a private eye, bloodhound or scientist.

Scientist? Of course. Because when you're a scientist, you're also a detective. At least that's how Dr. Tom Evans, University of Delaware plant pathologist, sees it. Evans is investigating the cause of soybean severe stunt disease in Delaware. Also involved in the project are plant pathologist Dr. Bob Carroll, Extension plant pathologist Bob Mulrooney and graduate student Teclemarian Weldekidan.

"It's really a detective story," Evans says. "And the facts point toward a new plant virus as the casual agent, and the dagger nematode as the vector or transmitter."

The disease, although not widespread, is devastating when it hits. The symptoms read like a list of medieval tortures of the plant world. The virus has no respect for youth: the first true leaves, developed when the soybean seedling is only a week old, signal the plant's plight. They are a thickened, misshapen, dark green, in contrast with the brighter, more delicate leaves of healthy plants. As the infected plant struggles to reach maturity, it is further thwarted by shortened internodes (the stem areas between sets of leaves), which result in the characteristically severe stunting. In addition, superficial cankers appear as long brown streaks along the stem. More importantly, the affected plants don't flower much or produce many seeds.

"You end up with very little yield from infected plants," Evans says.

The hunt for the culprit actually began several before Evans joined the university faculty. In the late 1970s, Carroll and Mulrooney noticed the disease near Millsboro while working on another soybean problem.

"We didn't know what the disease was," says Mulrooney. "We thought it might be tobacco ring spot virus or soybean mosaic virus. But we didn't have the virology background to pinpoint the disease. However, we did conduct field trials to identify some resistant soybean varieties."

When Evans arrived on the scene in 1986, the stage was set for a classic case of Extension and research teamwork: Extension personnel bringing a problem observed in the field to researchers, who work toward a solution.

"I was excited when I saw the disease," Evans says. "It looked like a new one."

The Delaware Soybean Board and the Delaware Pest Survey, also interested in the disease, helped fund the project -- actually a hunt for two culprits, the virus and the vector.

The scientists began by demonstrating that the disease could be transmitted mechanically, the first step in identifying a virus as the casual agent. To do this, sap prepared from infected soybean leaves was rubbed onto plants of susceptible soybean cultivars growing in the greenhouse, producing symptoms identical to those exhibited by infected soybeans in the field. To Evans, this evidence strongly suggests that the disease is not caused by a fungus, bacterium or pesticide residue because sap transmission of a plant pathogen other than a virus is extremely rare.

Step two in the identification process involved the sophisticated technology of electron microscopy. Evans and his co-workers observed infected plants through electromagnetic lenses that magnify up to 100,000 times, searching for spherical or rod-shaped particles that would indicate the presence of the virus.

Evans observed just such spherical particles in infected plants but not in healthy soybean plants, and he says the probability is good that the particles are causing the disease.

In step three, the scientists gathered and analyzed information that would characterize the virus.

"We noted symptoms, what species or varieties were affected, and the pattern or distribution in the field," Evans says. "Viruses are grouped together according to these characteristics. We were able to match our observations to a particular group.

"However, this virus acts drastically different from any other virus known to soybeans," Evans notes. "What we're dealing with in soybean stunt disease looks like a nepovirus -- a nematode-transmitted spherical virus. It seems to have the same chemical makeup and stability, as well as the physical and biological characteristics of the nepovirus group."

Normally, nepoviruses don't severely affect soybeans or annual crops, he explains. They are much more devastating in perennial crops such as orchards where large populations of nematodes (wormlike creatures just barely visible to the naked eye) can build up in the soil over time. However, the scientists have found large numbers of dagger nematodes, the suspected vector, in the soil of most of the fields affected with soybean severe stunt disease.

Based on the evidence, the researchers have developed the following scenario. They suspect that the nematode feeds on the roots of infected soybean plants and acquires the virus. It then overwinters in the soil or on the roots of weeds. When it feeds on new soybean roots in the spring, it infects those plants with the virus. But positively identifying the dagger nematode as the vector of soybean severe stunt disease is difficult.

Pear Thripes Are Threat To Sugar Maples

WELLSBORO (Tioga) — Sugar Maple foliage throughout much of northeastern United States was damaged this spring by a very small insect known as pear thrips, Taeniothrips inconsequens (Uzel). To residents of northern Pennsylvania, this damage is common and has been occurring for nearly a decade. Other more northerly states are experiencing their first encounter with thrips damage.

Foliage damaged by thrips resembles late frost injury. Light to moderately damaged leaves are 30-50 percent smaller than normal, which makes the tree crown appear thin. The individual leaves have a puckered appearance and are mottled yellow to pale green. Heavily damaged leaves are reduced in size by nearly 70 percent and will be more severely puckered and mottled. The leaf margins have a tattered or torn appearance. The tree crown has a brownish cast to it and is noticeably thin.

What effect is this insect having on sugar maples and what implications does it have for syrup producers? Very little research has been conducted to measure the impact of the thrips on the health of infested sugar maples. However, based on what we know about a tree's food production system, we can make some assumptions.

A tree needs foliage to produce the food it needs for both the current season's growth and some to store in the root system to fuel foliage the following spring. It is probably safe to assume that thrips damaged foliage, which is subnormal in both quality and quantity, will alter the food production capability of a tree. Also that repeated attacks over a number of years will result in lower overall vigor of the tree. Compound this with other stresses such as deficient rainfall (as in 1988), frost damage, and defoliation by other insects, and the prognosis is not good.

Unfortunately, there are no practical controls for this insect, chemical or otherwise. Until suitable controls for this insect become available, forest managers must attempt to control the other factors that influence a tree's vigor. For example, tapping, cultural practices, and damage by insects are stresses that often can be modified. Some suggestions for stressed stands are:

- Monitor trees periodically for damaging agents or signs of stress.
- Identify those trees with such signs of stress as branch dieback, defoliation, reduced sap production or sugar content.
- Limit tapping on stressed individuals.
- Forego thinning operations or operating heavy equipment in affected stands. The initial effect of thinnings and root compaction are stressful to residual trees.

- Intervene when insects such as fall cankerworm or forest tent caterpillar pose a further threat to tree vigor.

Work is underway to look for answers to the multitude of questions we have about thrips. Several states and the U.S. Forest Service have formed the "Regional Pear Thrips Committee." The objectives of this consortium are:

1. To gather and disseminate pertinent information about pear thrips impact, surveys, control, biology, and research action on sugar maple.
2. To coordinate training, survey methods, management recommendations, and research activities on sugar maples.
3. To identify needed research and training.

In addition, research is being initiated by the states of Vermont, Pennsylvania, and Massachusetts and the U.S. Forest Service to investigate ways to survey for pear thrips and methods to control the effect of pear thrips. Investigation into the biology and control of pear thrips will not yield results quickly. There is only one generation of thrips in a year. This species gives us only a fleeting glimpse of the adults, the larvae are quite small and furtive, and for about nine months of the year, they are completely secretive because they are in the ground. None of these habits are conducive to easy observation.

Until we have answers to the pear thrips mysteries, forest managers and sugar bush operators are advised to do what they can to limit other stresses on these trees. Perhaps it will be possible to have our maples and eat them too.

Detective Work

cult. And the scientists are looking for more than circumstantial evidence.

To prove that nematodes are the vectors, Evans must demonstrate transmission by nematodes in the greenhouse. To do this, he collects nematodes from soil surrounding infected plants, a labor-intensive process. Using a microscope to see the small organisms and very fine needles to pick them up, an experienced person can collect 30 nematodes per hour on a good day. The nematodes are added to sterile soil, and plants are grown in this infected soil and watched closely for symptoms of the disease.

"We've done this experiment twice, with 30-40 nematodes per plant, and still haven't been able to transmit the virus," Evans says. "To ensure infection, we need lots and lots of nematodes to carry the disease. Although 30 nematodes per plant might be the minimum threshold needed to cause disease in the field, we'll probably need a minimum of 100-200 per plant in the greenhouse."

Evans says one of the problems in going from the field to the greenhouse is that after nematodes are disturbed, many refuse to feed. That means the disease won't be transmitted. So Evans is now building a greenhouse nematode population in large crocks of field soil planted with Sudan grass, in the hopes of producing well above the minimum number of nematodes per plant needed to transmit the disease.

While the scientists continue to investigate this unusual disease, they're also helping soybean farmers deal with it. They have identified soybean varieties that are most susceptible to infection by the virus -- Verde, Avery and Essex. They have also identified three resistant cultivars -- HT-5203, A 5149 and Sparks -- that are essentially immune to it under normal field conditions.

In addition, the researchers plan to experiment with crop rotation to control dagger nematodes in the soil and thus limit the disease. By rotating soybeans with non-host plants such as corn, wheat or sorghum, they may be able to eliminate the nematode vector.

What motivates Evans and his colleagues to continue their pursuit of this disease?

"We've shown photo slides of the infected plants at national meetings and no one else seems to recognize the symptoms," he says. "The disease appears to be peculiar to Delaware and based on symptomatology, it is a new disease of scientific merit."

And so the detective work continues.

Milk Market News

LACKAWANNA CO.
AGENT

What Goes Up

SCRANTON (Lackawanna) — No one predicted the meteoric rise of $1.94 in the Minnesota - Wisconsin Price Series from April to December last year so it shouldn't be a surprise when it unexpectedly dropped like a rock in January. Certainly it was expected to fall seasonally as it always does at this time of the year but at a more gradual rate than the 37 cent tumble it took in January. But then it did go up as much as 50 cents in September so what goes up that fast can come down that fast.

And just as it was mainly the cheese price that took the M - W price into orbit it was cheese that brought it back down. Cheese prices fell 4.5 cents the second week of January and another 4.25 cents the following week. That was enough to signal trouble ahead but when they dropped another 5.75 cents the third week it was clear that they had reached their apogee, the flight was over and they were headed back for a landing. When you add up all the price drops it was a total of 14 cents from $1.32 to $1.18 a pound. That's only three cents above the $1.15 support price for cheese.

How Come?

Reasons for the sudden drop brought a variety of reactions. Everything from requests for a federal investigation to a normal, seasonal reaction were heard from the industry. The most acceptable explanation was that the industry over reacted from what they expected in milk supplies as buyers were looking ahead to the usual demand increases for the end of the year holidays. They were hedging against an expected drop in milk production last fall from the drought of last summer. As you know now, there was no drop in milk production. In fact it increased two percent over the last quarter of 1987 and 1988 finished with a new record high.

So, after building up inventories of cheese last fall in expectation of lower milk supplies that never came, cheese buyers now want to sell off their stocks rather than buying more so the market price drops. However, they still have to look ahead to next spring when the support price for cheese will increase five cents a pound. That will happen because the Drought Assistance Act, passed by Congress before they knew what the effect might be, will increase the support price by 50 cents from April to June. That's the normal time for building inventories of hard dairy products so handlers are betting now, because of your past milk production record, that there will be the usual spring flush to provide products to carry them through the summer demand. We'll see.

Lesson To Learn

If there's nothing else you learn from all of this, it should be the importance of cheese prices in your milk check. Assuming you understand the importance of the M-W price to your federal and state milk marketing orders it should be apparent that when butter and powder prices stay the same and only cheese prices change the effect is so dramatic. Some industry analysts feel that cheese prices represent 85 percent of the M-W and from the changes in the last six months I'm inclined to believe them.

When you consider that the average yield is 10 pounds of cheese from 100 pounds of milk that 14 cent drop in the cheese price in January could mean $1.40 drop in the milk price. If the high powder prices, now 20 cents above the support price, offset the low butter prices, now two cents below the support price, then it should be clear that the numbers on your milk check may be turning on the price of cheese. With a 50 cent increase in the support price from April to June the support price on cheese will increase from the present $1.15 to $1.20. With the present market price at $1.18 that doesn't leave much room for a further drop but there's nothing to prevent it from falling below this support price. This has happened in the past because "make allowances" have not been changed since 1980 in spite of increased processing costs. However, it's still a combination of butter, powder and cheese prices that determine the M-W. That's the reason you're seeing only a 37 cent drop from $12.27 in December to $11.90 in January but certainly you can expect further cuts in the next few months probably down to the new support levels by April.

Not All Bad

In spite of the sudden drop in cheese prices it's not all that bad. Even with the M-W at $11.90 it's still 99 cents higher than a year ago and still $1.07 above the support price of $10.83 for 3.5 milk that will be in effect from April to June. Because the M-W sets the Class 1 price two months in advance it will continue increasing in Order 2 from $14.43 in December to peak at $14.82 in February. That's the highest since January 1985. The Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board has continued their Drought Relief Order to August 31 adding $1.05 to the price of Class 1 milk paid by handlers. Premiums of all kinds from handlers and cooperatives will become a more important part of your milk check as market prices decline.

And finally, the uniform or blend price in Order 2 was $12.95 for January. Only 12 cents less than December but 92 cents better than last January you're still way ahead of last year. Prices higher than a year ago should continue into the spring flush helped by that 50 cent increase in the support price from April to June. What happens after that depends on feed prices, the weather and cow numbers. January receipts in Order 2 have already increased three percent over last year. If this continues, and it is likely, the first part of 1989 will be the best part.

1989 Commercial Tree Fruit Guide

NEWARK, DE — An updated tree fruit production guide for commercial growers is now available from University of Delaware Cooperative Extension.

The 1989 edition of the guide features up-to-date chemical treatments and spray schedules for apples, peaches, pears, plums, and sweet and sour cherries. The guide contains a table for keeping spray records and a table listing the number of days to wait between last application and harvest. General guidelines for orchard nutrition are also included.

Copies of "1989 Commercial Tree Fruit Production Recommendations" are available for $8 each and can be picked up at county Extension offices in Newark,

Prepare Leaded-Gas Engines For Unleaded Gas

EPHRATA (Lancaster) — Leaded gasolines are becoming increasingly rare and may soon be regulated out of existence by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA). Using unleaded gasoline in an engine designed for leaded fuel may cause mechanical problems over the long run unless preventive measures are taken.

Lead, in the form of tetraethyl lead, serves two main purposes in gasoline. First, by increasing the octane rating, it reduces knock (or "pinging") which limits the power a gasoline engine can produce without damage. Second, lead oxides and lead halides (often visible as white deposits) form a lubricating film on valves and valve seats, reducing wear on these parts. Without lead's lubrication, valves in older engines will eventually burrow down into their seats, an effect called valve recession. Valve recession can use up all of the possible valve lash adjustment of an engine and lead to an unsealed valve and loss of compression. Such a valve will soon burn and possibly fail, causing more serious engine damage. While there are non-lead alternatives to increase the octane rating of unleaded fuels, currently there are no replacements for tetraethyl lead that provide totally effective valve wear protection.

Lead is emitted into the air when it is burned in a fuel and would be a major health hazard if old, higher concentrations were still in use. Lead also disables catalytic converters, which are installed to reduce other dangerous exhaust emissions. This is why catalyst-equipped vehicles are required to use unleaded gasoline. The EPA has been acting to gradually phase out all lead in gasolines and currently limits gasoline lead content to just about the minimum concentration necessary to effectively control valve recession.

Practically all engines manufactured since 1974 have included specially hardened valves and seats designed to reduce wear and valve recession with unleaded gasoline. However, there are some exceptions, especially in the heavy-duty gasoline market. Most pre-1974 engines and those newer ones with specific recommendations for leaded gasoline are likely to have softer valve and seat materials that are prone to valve recession with unleaded gasoline.

The only way to guarantee an older engine's performance of unleaded fuel is to install specially hardened valve seats. Most cylinder heads can be machined to add reliefs around the valve areas for hardened valve seat inserts. The fit, alignment, and sealing of the seats are critical, so this job is best done by a qualified machine shop. The cost of this modification is approximately thirty dollars per cylinder, plus a twenty-five dollar labor charge per cylinder head. So, hardened valve seats for a four cylinder engine would cost about $165 plus the cost of removing and installing the cylinder head, if necessary.

There are some temporary measures to postpone the valve job just described. Engine failures due to valve recession do not occur overnight, and how long an overhaul can be avoided depends on the type of service, the amount of use, and the quality of maintenance an engine receives. Valve recession is aggravated by high combustion temperatures, which are increased by such factors as high engine speed, improper ignition timing or fuel mixture, and inadequate engine cooling. Here are a few preventive actions a farmer or mechanic can take to stay ahead of the problem:

- Keep the valves adjusted. If an engine has mechanical lash adjustment, check the valve tappet clearances more often than normal. If the valves should begin to recede, the progress can be monitored and the clearances may be adjusted to compensate. When the clearances cannot be adjusted to the recommended values, it is time for a valve job.

- Run engines at lower speed and resultant loads. Studies indicate that high-speed service with unleaded gasoline can quickly lead to failure in engines designed for leaded fuel.

- Keep the ignition timing properly adjusted. This preventive maintenance procedure will keep engine temperatures in line.

- Keep the carburetor properly adjusted. A lean fuel mixture will greatly increase combustion chamber temperatures, which aggravate valve recession and can also encourage engine knock.

- Maintain the coolant system. This practice helps reduce the chances of engine overheat. Change the antifreeze at least once every two years — or once a year for best results.

The lead-free fuel additives now being marketed promise to boost a fuel's octane rating and provide necessary valve lubrication. However, as the saying goes, let the buyer beware. An engine study sponsored by the EPA and USDA showed that, on typical agricultural machinery engines designed for leaded fuel, the lead replacement additives reduced, but did not eliminate, valve recession. In quantities the eliminated valve recession, the additives caused increased intake valve deposits, which can also lead to compression loss.

Furthermore, most additives are marketed at a price which may cost as much as $1.00 for every ten gallons of unleaded fuel treated — so a lead replacement additive can add as much as 10 percent to an engine's total fuel cost, at typical 1988 prices. It is also possible to actually purchase tetraethyl lead, blended into a fuel additive that is even more expensive than the lead replacement additives. Over the long run, money spent on additives at each refueling might be better used to install hardened valve seat inserts, which provide a permanent solution to valve recession.

Public Hunting Land Expansion Legislation

HARRISBURG — Senator Edward Helfrick (R-27) is reintroducing legislation this session to expand public hunting lands by offering reduced-fee hunting licenses to farmers who open their lands for hunting.

Helfrick said that farmers who open 80 acres of land would be eligible for a $3 dollar reduced-fee license, plus a 75 cent issuing fee. Farmers may keep no more than 20 percent of their total land in safety zones.

In addition to the safety zone limitation, participating farmers must comply with a conservation plan established under the Clean Streams Law of 1937 concerning erosion-control regulations. According to the Senator, these requirements would ensure that wildlife habitat is preserved for the benefit of both hunters and game.

Senator Helfrick's proposal has received the support of the Pennsylvania Game Commission.

Helfrick introduced identical legislation last session. However, the House Committee on Game and Fisheries gutted the bill, changing it to a land acquisition vehicle.

"I was very disappointed by the Committee's decision to eliminate reduced-fee licenses when they amended the bill," said Helfrick. "But this has not discouraged me from working for the passage of this important legislation this year."

Eight Reasons For Getting A Conservation Plan Now

LEESPORT — If you plan to farm highly erodible cropland after December 31, 1989 and retain your eligibility for USDA benefits, there are at least eight good reasons why you should get your conservation plan prepared and approved as early this year as possible.

Robert Heidecker, state resource conservationist for the USDA Soil Conservation Service in Pennsylvania, said the Food Security Act of 1985 requires conservation plans for highly erodible cropland by the end of 1989 to maintain USDA farm program benefits. "What every farmer needs to realize is that they need to start actively applying the plan with the 1990 crop," Heidecker said. "You have until December 31, 1994 to complete the planned practices."

"Wait until January 1, 1990 or later to get a plan approved and you could find yourself having to get the entire plan completely installed before producing the next agricultural commodity crop and have USDA program benefits," added Heidecker. Since a conservation plan usually takes five or more years to apply, the farmer could be without USDA program benefits for a period of time if he waits until 1990 or later to get his plan.

Heidecker explained these reasons for getting a conservation plan immediately: 1. USDA cost share assistance will probably become short during the early 1990s because of the demands created by recent planning. The sooner you get your plan and apply for cost share, the better.

2. If your plan calls for a crop rotation of high residue crops every few years, any such crops grown in 1989 in accordance with a plan, count as a part of your rotation for the same years. Wait until after December 31 to get your conservation plan and the crops you grow this year may not count.

3. If you lease or rent land to others or from others, both the tenant and the landlord need to know well in advance the conservation treatment needed for staying eligible for farm program benefits. If the needed treatments are expensive and the landlord is not willing to pay part of the cost, some renters will not be farming that land after 1990.

4. If the practices needed are expensive, you might prefer to bid the land into the Conservation Reserve program. By putting the land in continuous grass or trees, an annual rental payment would be received from USDA for 10 years.

5. Serious soil erosion problems may require detailed engineering surveys before conservation treatment needs can be determined. Some of this expertise may be located in regional offices miles from the county. Scheduling of this type assistance is already backlogged in some counties. The longer that planning is delayed, the greater the prospect of further delays in the planning and application process. Farmers who wait until late 1989 will probably find it impossible to get assistance before the December 31, 1989 deadline.

6. If the plan you choose includes a crop rotation with a high residue crop for which you have no base acreage, you may need to ask the local Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service office to let you exchange one base crop for another. The exchange could require the approval of more than one USDA agency, which can take several weeks. Farmers who wait lose again!

7. In some counties the Soil Conservation Service does not have enough personnel to handle the present workload. Those who wait until mid-summer will find many farmers ahead of them waiting for planning help. Farmers who do not get their plan prepared and approved before December 31, 1989, will probably lose at least one or two years of USDA program eligibility.

8. Conservation plans need to be approved by county conservation districts. Most districts meet once per month. Waiting past the November conservation district meeting is risky.

Under the sodbuster provision of the Act, farmers who plow out highly erodible grassland and plant it to a crop lose all program benefits unless the land is protected from excessive erosion the year the first crop is produced. Under swampbuster provisions, farmers lose the same benefits if they alter or plant wetlands to a crop.

At the present time, conservation planning is complete on 68 percent of the highly erodible cropland in Pennsylvania, states Heidecker. Out of 1.68 million acres of highly erodible cropland, plans have been prepared and approved for about one million acres.

If you are one of the farmers whose highly erodible cropland is not under a conservation plan, it is to your advantage to contact the USDA Soil Conservation Service office before Spring and request planning assistance.

Goodling Schedules Hearing On Vocational Education

WASHINGTON, DC — Congressman Bill Goodling (PA-19) and Chairman Augustus Hawkins will lead the House of Representatives' Education and Labor Committee to southcentral Pennsylvania to hold a Congressional hearing on federal vocational education programs Monday, March 13, at 9:30 a.m. at the York Area Vocational Technical School.

"This hearing will give Congress an opportunity to hear from the people who deal with these programs on a daily basis and to learn more about vocational education in a real-life setting," Goodling said. "By holding the hearing in York, we are giving southcentral Pennsylvania a voice in federal voc-ed programs. This is an opportunity for local educators, businessmen and others interested in vocational education to tell us what's working, what isn't and what improvements they would like to see. They can help us restructure the program to best serve students and the workforce now and into the next decade."

During the hearings, members of the Education and Labor Committee will hear testimony from local educators, representatives of business and labor, and state and local officials. Afterwards, Committee members will tour York Vo-Tech.

"Vocational education is a vital opportunity for our students and a tremendous resource for our economy," Goodling noted. "American business can not afford to live in the past, and neither can American vocational education. Our voc-ed programs must keep pace with the realities of today's students and the demands of today's workplace."

Federal vocational education programs are aimed at providing funding and direction to the states in an effort to help them improve their vocational education programs and to help ensure access to quality programs for all individuals.

Goodling and Hawkins are Ranking Minority Member and Chairman, respectively, of the House Education and Labor Committee.

ASA Delegates Vote To Pursue Nationwide Soybean Checkoff

ST. LOUIS, MO. — In a special meeting, 272 farmers serving as American Soybean Association (ASA) Voting Delegates have voted to pursue a united nationwide soybean checkoff.

"U.S. soybean farmers and their profits are under attack," said ASA President James Lee Adams. "Malaysian palm producers are checking off equal to 7.7 cents per bushel, which will generate a $14.4 million war chest. That's just one commodity's effort to take away our sales and profits. We soybean farmers must respond before it's too late."

Recognizing the challenge, ASA delegates acted based on nearly a year of research and study, 40 hours of farmer-leader debate, 275 pages of information and interviews with 2,005 ASA member and non-member farmers.

Adams said independent surveys conducted for ASA showed that U.S. soybean farmers overwhelmingly support a nationwide soybean checkoff.

"Two-thirds of the farmers polled said they favor a nationwide checkoff because it is fair," Adams said. "Everyone who benefits would invest in the checkoff. In addition to fairness, our delegates also supported four other principles that farmers say they want in a nationwide checkoff."

"These include: farmer-run with all decisions made by working farmers; an administrative cap where the law limits overhead costs to no more than five percent; a state-oriented program where 50 percent of funds would stay within each soybean state with farmers from the state controlling funds through existing state programs; and a requirement for a farmer-referendum to approve continuation of the checkoff once it is established, as well as a farmer vote before the checkoff amount could be raised."

Adams said checkoff funds would be used to create and promote new uses for soybeans; to promote export expansion; to promote soybeans in the U.S.; and to conduct research to help cut U.S. soybean production costs.

The ASA President said the Association would ask that Congress prohibit using checkoff funds to influence legislation or to lobby on domestic farm policy issues.

ASA's Voting Delegates approved seeking a nationwide checkoff at one-half percent of the value of a bushel, or 50 cents for every $100 in sales.

"The percentage approach is new, but fair," Adams said. "Farmers told us they like a percentage because it is fair among regions which have different prices because of the basis. They said they like it because when prices drop, the checkoff amount drops. And, they said they like it because it would make ASA consider price as well as the number of bushels produced."

The next step involves seeking Congressional legislation to establish a nationwide soybean promotion and research program. If Congress approves legislation, the U.S. Department of Agriculture would write a marketing order outlining specific operational procedures for a nationwide soybean checkoff.

"We're probably two or three years away," Adams said. "And that worries me. The Malaysians, Brazilians and other foreign competitors won't wait for us. They're out in the world today trying to steal our markets. We farmers must fight back. And we must work to capture the tremendous market potential in the U.S., Soviet Union and China.

"We're at a crossroads. We have the opportunity to double the value of U.S. soybeans. But, if we don't act, there's a real potential to watch our crop wither to half its current value."

Dairy Of Distinction Program Called Beneficial; Seeks 1989 Applications Now

(Deadline For Applications is April 15, 1989)

HARRISBURG (Dauphin) — The Northeast Dairy of Distinction farm beautification program rewards clean, well-kept farmsteads to help with consumer acceptance of dairy products in the store.

At the recent annual meeting of the Pennsylvania division here, State Secretary Paul Nichols reported an increase in publicity for dairymen created by the Dairy of Distinction program in 1988.

For example, James Brubaker of Mt. Joy, a Lancaster County winner, and State President Everett Newswanger appeared on a state-wide syndicated public TV program. Also a "Philadelphia Inquirer" reporter interviewed Newswanger and several Dairy of Distinction winners for a story. And the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture sent a list of winners to all their news contacts across the state.

In 1987, Pennsylvania received 329 applications and chose 99 winners. In 1988, there were 229 applications with 94 winners. Letters of quality went out to all milk handlers. Two negative responses were returned.

Again in 1988, Governor Robert Casey declared a Dairy of Distinction week by signing a proclamation that was presented by State Ag Secretary Boyd Wolff at the reception for all winners at Ag Progress Days in August. At that time, LANCASTER FARMING presented color photographs to each Dairy of Distinction winner, too.

Edgefield Farms, owned by the Kenneth Rutt family, Quarryville, Lancaster County was one of the 94 state-wide winners in 1988. New applications for the 1989 program are now being accepted.

"Since we now have worked on the program for three years, the benefits have started to multiply," Newswanger said. "Not only does the extra favorable publicity in the general press help bring modern farm practices to the attention of urban people, it helps the farmer, too. Many winners use the distinction to promote their own operation or to seek and hire farm labor."

And now is the time when additional dairy farmers may apply for the Dairy of Distinction award. Also farms that had applied in previous years but did not win are eligible to reapply this year. The Dairy of Distinction farms are automatically entered for rejudging along with the new applications to insure each designated farm maintains the standard of excellence required by the program.

Pennsylvania has been divided into 10 districts. Each district has been designated according to its number of dairy cows. Up to 10 farm awards per district may be given each year. Deadline for entry is April 15.

Judging takes place in the month of May and is based on the roadside appearance of buildings, grounds and surroundings. A local district team of judges visits each farm and uses a score sheet to rate each farm. In the Pennsylvania program, in addition to this team of judges, the sanitarian for the farm's cooperative or dealer-handler will be asked to be part of the judging process.

Winners receive a colorful, 18x24-inch Dairy of Distinction sign to be placed at the entrance to the farmstead. In addition, as in past years, an 11x14-inch color portrait of the farm will be given to each winning farm in the Pennsylvania program by LANCASTER FARMING.

The Dairy of Distinction program is a cooperative, widespread industry effort. Sponsors include: milk promotion groups, cooperative extension, State Departments of Agriculture, the Grange, Farm Bureau, producer groups and agribusinesses. The program is run by volunteers at all levels of the organization.

Pennsylvania Districts

Pennsylvania is divided into ten districts. Approximately 10 Dairy of Distinction awards will be made each year in each district. There is no cost to the applicant.

Pennsylvania area chairpersons are:

As a winner, you will receive a certificate and a nice metal sign to put at the end of your farm lane. In addition, LANCASTER FARMING will present this year's winners in Pennsylvania with a color portrait print of their farm. If your farm is a winner, be sure you or your district committee takes a color photograph of your farm and sends the negative and proof to LANCASTER FARMING in time for the awards ceremony.

Chester County Releases 1989 Parks, Recreation Guide

W. CHESTER (Chester) — More than 3,000 acres of county park land throughout Chester County provide year-round recreation opportunities. The "1989 Program Guide" for the Chester County Parks and Recreation Department explores features in each county park, tour programs and special events. The "Program Guide," an expanded version of the previous calendar of events, is available at any county park and/or the Department Administrative Office.

The county parks system includes Hibernia, Nottingham and Warwick County Parks, Springton Manor Farm, Hatfield House, Struble Lake and the Struble Hiking and Biking Trail. Highlighted in the guide are locations for bicycling, hiking, picnicking, nature trails and environmental education. Directions to all facilities, mailing addresses and phone numbers are included.

For historic home buffs, tours of Hibernia Mansion and Springton Manor provide an opportunity to see the inside of these restored homes. Hibernia Mansion will open for its summer season Memorial Day weekend and remain open each Sunday afternoon until Labor Day. Springton Manor is open for public tours the second Sunday of each month all year.

The farm complex at Springton Manor Farm will remain on its winter schedule until Memorial Day weekend. Currently the farm complex is only open on weekends; weekdays are reserved for scheduled groups. From late May until early September, the demonstration farm will be open to the public daily, 10 am - 4 pm. The entire park site is open for casual visitors 8 am - dusk, daily.

Most of the Department's annual special events are returning in 1989 including the "Old Fiddler's Picnic," a Chester County tradition, and the Halloween thriller "Dark in the Park," which was rained out in 1988. One change to the schedule was the move of the Ice Fishing Clinic to later in January in anticipation of thicker ice on Struble Lake. The complete schedule of special events includes:

Maple Sugar Festival, March 11, Springton Manor Farm.
Easter Egg Hunts, March 25, Warwick, Nottingham and Hibernia Parks.
Summer Festival, June 24, Warwick Park.
Country Fair, July 22, Nottingham Park.

Old Fiddler's Picnic, August 12, Hibernia Park.
Senior Citizen's Picnic, September 12, Hibernia Park.
Frontier Day, September 16, Warwick Park.
Fat Tire Bike Challenge, September 17, Hibernia Park.
Gospel Sing, September 24, Nottingham Park.
Dark in the Park, October 19-21, Nottingham, Hibernia & Warwick Parks.
Candlelight Tours, December 6-10, Hibernia Park.
Ice Fishing Clinic, January 13, Struble Lake.

The Department will be featuring public programs of special interest in 1989 through its "Summer Program Series." Each park site will host a number of programs of special local interest that both highlight the natural resources of the park and encourage outdoor recreation activities. Complete listings will be available April 1, 1989.

To receive your copy of the 1989 Program Guide contact the county park nearest you or the Administrative Office at 235 West Market Street, West Chester, PA 19382, 215/344-6415.

Good Year For Farm Industry

MINNEAPOLIS, MN — The outlook for an end to the drought of the last two years in optimistic, and the nation's farmers are likely to earn higher net incomes in '89, according to Piper, Jaffray & Hopwood Agribusiness Analyst George Dahlman, in a recently published report.

Dahlman, a managing director and chartered financial analyst for the Minneapolis-based investment firm, based his predictions for a return to at least normal rainfall this spring on historical weather trends that show that every severely dry year has been followed by a year of above-average rainfall. In the current "Food/Agribusiness Outlook" report, Dahlman said that the historical pattern is reinforced by the amount of precipitation already received this year in the Corn Belt, where snow and rainfall has been above average levels.

Dahlman said that he expects farmers to increase their plantings this spring and to become more efficient in the use of production elements such as fertilizer. "Combining the increased plantings with better land-use efficiencies and a rise in expenses of only 5-7 percent, net farm income should rise despite increased costs." He indicated that since 1982, net income of U.S. farmers has increased between 100-200 percent, with only 10 percent of American farmers remaining in the hard-core financially stressed situations.

If current supplies of corn, wheat, and soybeans dwindle as expected in the first part of the year, the 1989 harvest will be just in time to build the reserves back to desired levels, Dahlman calculated.

The results of this improved agricultural picture will not only benefit farmers, but also numerous agribusinesses, Dahlman reported. Those companies cited in his report include: Archer Daniels Midland Company, Pioneer Hi-Bred International, Inc., Varsity Corporation, ConAgra, Inc., packaged goods firms such as Dean Foods Company, Country Lake Foods, Inc., General Mills, Inc., Geo. A. Hormel & Co., Golden Valley Microwave Foods, Inc., Michael Foods, Inc., International Multifoods Corporation, and Sara Lee Corporation.

Food wholesalers may also be the beneficiaries of a 6 percent price inflation rate for 1989, according to Steve Carnes, Piper Jaffray's food analyst and co-author of the report. "This group (of food wholesalers) has underperformed for the last 18 months."

A free copy of the "Food/Agribusiness Outlook" report can be obtained by contacting any local Piper Jaffray office or calling 612/342-6463.

SEARCHING FOR A ROOF THAT WILL NOT NEED REPLACEMENT IN 25 YEARS?

DOUBLE LOCKED STANDING SEAM ROOFING

TODAYS FORMING EQUIPMENT HAS IMPROVED AN OLD BUT VERY DURABLE CONCEPT IN ROOFING

Power panformer allows the use of metals up to 24 gauge. In a variety of finishes.

On sight roll former can produce panels well over 100 ft. in length. Expansion cleats allow these panels to expand without loosening the fastener.

All concealed fasteners. No face nails or screws to work loose and leak.

Why more people are taking a liking to beef and veal.

Have we got good news for you Your dollar-per-head beef checkoff investment is paying off at the checkout counter Throughout Pennsylvania, and all around the country, real people are coming back to the real value and good nutrition of beef and veal

The number of Americans who believe beef fits into their lifestyles is up 5% in six months. 56% of all Americans believe beef is an important part of a well-balanced diet—that number's grown. And a whopping 88% are aware of the national TV, radio, and print advertising campaign that you've helped fund

Of course, your checkoff dollars go a lot farther than advertising, a lot farther than you may think Your dollars are also invested in important research programs on nutrition, diet and health.

and new product marketing Educational programs for schools, dieticians, and doctors receive your help Even media education, leading to positive news stories about beef and veal, is made possible by your much needed dollars

By the way, 50¢ of every one of those dollars is controlled by your state beef council. That means better funding for state and local programs, which hit a lot closer to your home. And with a 5% cap on the costs to run the checkoff program, you know your money is invested wisely

So, congratulations Your products once again are earning the respect they deserve. But our work's not done. We urge you to continue your faithfulness to the checkoff program. After all, if you don't give a buck for beef, no one else will LORSBAN... because America loves apples.

Americans begin their love affair with apples at a very early age and it lasts a lifetime. Clean, crisp, smooth skinned, unblemished apples are a favorite, and it's up to you to grow them that way.

LORSBAN* 50W insecticide stops your worst apple insect pests including codling moth, San Jose scale, green, rosy and wooly apple aphid, leafrollers, green fruitworm and many more.

Even though LORSBAN 50W is tough on apple insect pests, it's easy on beneficials and won't flare mites. And LORSBAN 50W is not a restricted use product. When you use LORSBAN 50W according to label recommendations, it's safer to human and animal health, and the environment.

For more information about LORSBAN 50W, contact your local Dow Chemical Representative or call 1-800-258-CHEM.

Protect the delicious objects of their affection with LORSBAN 50W Insecticide.

Regardless of the insecticide you choose, ALWAYS READ THE LABEL BEFORE USE AND ALWAYS CAREFULLY FOLLOW ALL LABEL DIRECTIONS AND PRECAUTIONS for safe use

LORSBAN 50W is a Restricted Use Pesticide in Vermont and New Jersey as required by state law

FABARB COMPLETE MILKING HERD DISPERSAL

WITH SELECTED BRED HEIFERS AND SHOW PROSPECT CALVES
WED., MARCH 22, 1989
11:00 A.M.

Arkport, (Steuben Co.) New York. Sale to be held at the farm located along State Rte. 36, 2 miles north of Arkport, 6 miles south of Dansville, 3 miles east of Canaseraga.

130 INTERSTATE TESTED, HOME-RAISED HOLSTEINS SELL 110 Registered, 20 Grade Cows-Majority Calfhood Vaccinated (R.H.A. 18,706 3.6% 676 2x). Cattle bred for year around freshening, milked in stanchions and tie stalls, raised and dry housed in freestalls. This commercial-purebred herd will work in anyones barn. Cattle genetically mated for years using top AI bulls from various units with emphasis on udders, feet and legs.

A great herd to select foundation stock or replacements for the commercial farmer needing milk or for that discriminating dairyman needing those "Chief Marks" and "Bells" to further enhance his show herd.

Guarantee: All Bred Gilt are guaranteed to farrow at least 8 pigs.

Mr. Commercial Man: If you have not used Large Whites, you need to 80% of the Large Whites will farrow 10 to 14 pigs. The other 20% will either be above or below (And they can raise them) Bred Gilt are normally a cheap way to buy boars and gilts for the future.

Attention Mr. Commercial Man: We will be offering an excellent set of Duroc and L.W. Tested Boars in this sale.

Special Attraction

• All L.W. Bred Gilt are bred to tested L.W. Boars. This is the best group of tested sires we have ever used. Low days to 230#, Low BF bigger loin eyes than ever before.

• Many Duroc Bred Gilt will be carrying litters to (Nails II Jr.) - 134 Days to 230# .67 BF, 5.74 LE (Doc III) 126 days to 230# .78 B.F. 5.96 L.E. (Nails III) 143 Days to 230# .55 B.F. 6.10 L.E. (Pro Lean), 139 Days to 230# .61 B.F. 5.82 L.E.

• We have recently purchased, from the Jones herd in Tennessee, one of the most Genetically Powerful Boars in the Duroc Breed - JJ TOTAL 4-1 (131 days to 236, .68 BF). He has sired hogs as low as 126 days to 230 and hogs as lean as .45 BF in his first crop. His offspring are long, lean, heavy muscled and extremely sound. His nipple and udder quality is tremendous. His Dam has raised 69 pigs in her first 6 litters. BE THE FIRST TO SHARE IN THIS $10,000 GENETIC GIANT. We will offer 6 free breeding services to this Boar in our September Sale.

Maxi-Tech[®] Milking Concentrates and Completes helps her to milk to the max without draining her reserves.

Your cows react to hard work in much the same way you do. When they work extra hard to give maximum production, they can become drained. Exhausted. Burned out. And that can lead to reduced butterfat test and weight loss, costly missed heats, health problems and loss in future production capability.

But that's all changed. Now there's milking supplements that help your cows produce to their fullest genetic capacity while maintaining their body condition. It's Purina's Maxi-Tech Lineup, the highest-energy milking supplements you can buy.

The secret is its unsurpassed nutrition — featuring high-energy content, optimum nitrogen sources, fermentable fiber, minerals, vitamins and specially blended macro-nutrients. So unlike other concentrates, Maxi-Tech's keep your cows in great shape to encourage capacity production, good health and fast breedback—without depressing butterfat levels. Lactation after lactation.

So whether you grind and mix or feed a total mixed ration, your cows can now milk to the max without burning themselves out. See your Purina dealer today for a Maxi-Tech supplement that is right for your operation.
